Mr. Hughes, Chief Justice.
Whisky Owns Page One.
Henry Ford's New Plan.
Philadelphia's Best.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

EMPORIA, Kan., Feb. 15.

MR. HUGHES is now Chief Justice, and the people have in their service a man of great ability, profound knowledge of the law, and highest integrity. They know that Mr. Hughes, for the sake of public service, exchanges a private law practice worth $500,000 a year for the small wages paid by the richest nation to its highest judges.

SENATOR NORRIS and others opposed Mr. Hughes' confirmation, alleging that the newly-appointed chief justice is too much in sympathy with great corporations. If that is so, he is in sympathy with the United States government, for great corporations are really the government of the United States. Whoever does not know that, knows little.

SOME radicals suggest that we take our Supreme Court judges too seriously, choosing them among ordinary men, then bowing down and grovelling down before them, as ancient Egyptians chose their sacred ox, from among many oxen, and worshiped that ox as a god. The objection is not sound; men must look up to something and they could choose to respect and reverence nothing better than those to whom the Constitution gives power to interpret and even to nullify laws after the people's representatives have passed them. That does not mean, however, that citizens must give up the right to think for themselves, or forget that 120,000,000 Americans are above corporations, Supreme Court, President and everything else.

HOW long will the front pages be devoted to whisky? Passing through Arizona you find on the Albuquerque Journal's front page, edited by Messrs. Peperday and Pickrell, these headlines:

"Farmer wounds deputy, is shot dead in dry raid on house."

"Liquor cases in Oklahoma are finished."

"Patrons who take own liquor to cafes will face arrest."

"Former judge and 14 others in Pittsburgh acquitted of prohibition violation charge."

"One hundred and thirty-two indicted in St. Louis for Jones law dry offenses."

"Negro hadn't heard of prohibition law."

AND more about whisky on inside pages. Isn't it time for this country, somehow or other, to settle its whisky problem and attend to something else?

HENRY FORD may spend $100,000,000 establishing schools that will enable students to "fit into life" when they come out at 18 years of age. He says "the reason we have so much crime and racketeering is because schools do not teach our young men how to fit in the world. Racketeering is nothing but a revolt against the present improper ineffectual system of teaching."

SCHOOLS at present are better than they were 50 years ago, before racketeering became a science. Students should all learn to use their hands, particularly those not well adapted to using their heads. It would be waste of time for men of the type of Voltaire, Milton, Moliere, Beethoven, to learn a trade, but they are scarce.

MR. FORD should modify his resolution to "devote the best of his life to educational undertaking." Part of his effort should produce tractors of the caterpillar type. Plenty of power with the traction "track." Fully enclosed. Protected from dust.

HE OUGHT especially to push ahead the aviation work in which he has already rendered great service. Until he has built his plane to carry 500 passengers and his pursuit plane to go 500 miles an hour, Mr. Ford's most important work will remain undone. Many can teach trades; few can build machinery for hundreds of millions of people.

THE Bok award of $10,000 for "the Philadelphian who during the year has performed an act of service calculated to advance the best and largest interest of Philadelphia" goes to Mr. Connie Mack. He, as you probably know, rejuvenated the "Athletics" baseball team, winning the American League pennant and world series.

CONNIE MACK no doubt delighted thousands of children of all ages in and out of Philadelphia. But what were other Philadelphians doing during the year? You would expect an award in Monkeyland to go to a monkey able to throw a cocoanut farthest and fastest. Some other sign of excellence would be expected among intellectual Philadelphians.

23 GIRLS IN 'Y' ROUTED BY BLAZE

Firemen at Turtle Creek Lead Group to Safety; Flee in Night Clothing

Twenty-three girls were driven from their beds to the street by fire which broke out in the Turtle Creek branch of the Young Women's Christian Association at Penn and Shaw avenues early today.

Many of them were in their night clothes as they were led by firemen down the fire escape of the three-story building.

DAMAGE BY FLAMES

Six of the eight bedrooms on the second floor and the dance hall and a reception room on the third floor were damaged by the flames.

Miss Ethel Christensen, secretary of the branch, who turned in the alarm, suffered a sprained ankle in hurrying from the building, which houses the Turtle Creek Savings and Trust Company on the first floor.

There had been a dance last night on the third floor. The lights suddenly went out and were repaired temporarily. Later the girls complained that heat seemed to be coming from the walls of their bedrooms.

LOCKER ROOM BLAZE

The fire started in a locker room alongside the dance hall on the third floor and was well under way before discovered by some of the girls who arose early today. The girls were able to save all of their possessions.

Water caused some damage to the entire building, but the bank was able to open for business today. Fire Chief E. D. Kenyon estimated the damage at $5,000.

W. L. MELLON SILENT ON SLATE

Leaves for Florida Without Comment on His Reported O. K. for Grundy, Lewis

W. L. Mellon, former Republican state chairman, today is en route to Florida, leaving local politicians to speculate on a slate of candidates for state offices that was reported to have the approval of Mellon and Senator Joseph R. Grundy.

Mellon has declined to comment on the slate and the last word from his office before he left last night was that he was too busy preparing for his vacation to make a statement.

The reported slate is headed by Grundy to succeed himself and Samuel S. Lewis for governor. It includes State Senator Frank J. Harris as candidate for lieutenant governor.

WOODWARD SEES MELLON

Harris reiterated last night that he has not decided to enter the race as many of his friends were urging him to remain in the Senate to complete a comprehensive program of welfare legislation.

The slate does not include James P. Woodward, of McKeesport, state secretary of internal affairs, and broadcasting of the ticket brought Woodward in haste from Harrisburg yesterday for an interview with Mellon.

Woodward is said to have announced his candidacy for re-election but doubt existed whether he got any encouragement from Mellon.

After an audience lasting but a few minutes, Woodward withdrew and Mellon maintained silence.

Judge James B. Drew, of Common Pleas Court, is said to have

Stone Hurled at Cab Crashes Through Store Window; State Police Call Urged

BULLETIN.

Police Supt. P. P. Walsh, visiting the East End battleground in the taxi strike, today ordered all cabs off the street parking stands in the business district of East Liberty. He issued the order because crowds began to gather in the vicinity of the stands.

Cabs were permitted to cruise and to continue to park at the East Liberty station of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Taxicab strike violence again broke out today in the East Liberty district when strike sympathizers began storming Green cabs placed in operation under guard of police mobilized in East End and Oakland.

A stone hurled at a Yellow cab near its stand at Penn and Sheridan avenues missed the vehicle and crashed through a display window in the store of Aufhammer & Evans, men's furnishings, 6100 Penn avenue. Police rushed to the scene, but the perpetrators escaped.

Police were mobilized in East Liberty and Oakland to guard against a repetition of yesterday's general outbreaks of taxicab strike sympathizers who have burned and wrecked cabs, beat drivers, clubbed deputies and otherwise staged a reign of terror on the city streets during the past three days.

Ten Green cabs moved through East Liberty streets this morning from the company garage in Ellsworth avenue without being molested. Five proceeded to East Liberty station, the others to Penn and Sheridan avenues.

The company's permit provides for only two cabs at the latter stand and police ordered three away. One was driven to the station and the others parked at Penn and Highland avenues.

Nightfall brought peace and quiet to the city after the combined efforts of city police and deputy sheriffs in the employ of the cab companies to protect drivers and equipment had failed.

Green cabs were withdrawn from

COLD WAVE DUE HERE TONIGHT

Lowest temperature tonight about 5 degrees, is the official forecast for the Pittsburgh district. Continued cold tomorrow is the prospect.

BROTHERS SHOT BY BANDITS

Two brothers were wounded, one fatally, and another man was slugged on the head with a revolver butt in a struggle with two bandits in Weddell Brothers Bar-B-Q stand, Long Run road, about a mile from McKeesport, early today.

During the encounter one of the thugs was struck on the head with a coffee pot and is believed to have been injured. County detectives notified hospitals to be on the outlook for the man.

His brother, Charles Weddell, 38, also in the hospital, suffered a wound in the chest. Both were hit on the head by the thugs after being shot. Carl D. Wisser, a brother-in-law of William Weddell, was struck on the head, but suffered only a laceration.

The thugs entered the barbecue shortly after 2 o'clock. One went to the kitchen, where he engaged Wisser in conversation. Without warning, he drew a revolver, but before he could shoot, Wisser grabbed him.

Charles and William Weddell went to Wisser's assistance. The second intruder, who had left the barbecue momentarily, returned and also drew a revolver.

In the tussle for possession of the first thug's weapon, it was discharged, Wisser said. Another shot felled William. After both brothers had been wounded, the thugs fled without attempting to obtain loot, Wisser said today.

State police were notified of the shooting and asked to be on the lookout for the pair.

California Woman Seeks Governorship

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 15.—(AP.)—Mrs. Clara Shortridge Foltz, attorney, today was laying plans to seek the Republican nomination for governor. She is the first woman ever to enter the race in California.

Mrs. Foltz, sister of Samuel Shortridge, United States Senator from California, announced her candidacy yesterday with a statement that she saw no reason why a qualified woman should not seek the office. She cited her years of experience as a lawyer, and long participation in the affairs of the state as qualifications.

Zero Temperatures Promised Mid-West

CHICAGO, Feb. 15.—(AP.)—Chills are again running up the Middle West's back, and mercury after several days in the higher altitude of thermometers, is slinking down toward the ball at the bottom.

The government forecast here saw zero for many sections of this territory by tonight, and there were sub zero readings in the Northwest. But no protracted cold wave was in sight.

East Drinks Most Rum, Says Volstead

PRINCETON, N. J., Feb. 15.—(INS.)—The East is a greater violator of prohibition laws than the West, according to Andrew J. Volstead, author of the dry enforcement act.

In an interview with the Daily Princetonian, student publication of Princeton University, Volstead declared, "West of Chicago the situation is generally dry."

Volstead said he believed that prohibition enforcement was generally improved. He said there was less drinking among college students now than in 1919.

Hoover Lands 2nd Fish, Leaves Florida Tonight

LONG KEY, Fla., Feb. 15.—(INS.)—President Hoover wound up a one-week vacation in Florida today with one final fling, a sailfish. He caught one the first day out, but since then Mrs. Hoover and all his guests have topped his catch.

Tonight, after dinner, the presidential party will entrain for Washington, and will reach the capital Monday morning.

All of Mr. Hoover's efforts with rod and reel this week have been rather unsatisfactory. For the most part he has sat patiently in the stern of his boat and acquired nothing but a red hot sunburn.

Mrs. Stone, wife of the associate justice of the Supreme Court, holds the record for the week with a 66-pound sailfish.

ARMS ENVOYS OPTIMISTIC DESPITE IMPASSE AT PARLEY

DOOM LIKELY FOR NAVAL CUT PLAN

Hope Placed in Future as French Demand Threatens World Building Program

By HARRY R. FLORY,
International News Service.

LONDON, Feb. 15. — Brought to an impasse by France's firm demands for a fleet of 724,479 tons by 1936, the delegates at the London Naval Conference, now resting during the week-end adjournment, continued optimistic today despite the apparent futility of any hopes that real naval armament reduction will be effected at the present parley.

All the chief delegates feel that even if the present conference does not succeed in reducing the navies of the five great naval powers, it will at least effect definite equilibrium among these fleets which should pave the way for actual reduction at a future conference, possibly in 1935.

BIGGER NAVIES POSSIBLE

As the situation stands now France's demands for a fleet equal to that of the combined navies of Italy and Germany have brought her figures for minimum tonnage up to a point where Great Britain, in order to safeguard her Mediterranean interests, may feel compelled to increase her demands.

With Britain and the United States pledged to the principle of parity, this would mean that the United States with a navy at present far inferior to that of Britain in power, would have to enter upon a huge navy building program rather than attempt naval reduction.

RUSE SEEN IN DEMAND

However, there are many who still see a loophole. These feel that despite Premier Tardieu's refusal to admit it, his figure of 724,479 tons for France was put forth solely for bargaining purposes.

All the delegates are now out of London for the week-end. Secretary of State Stimson and the other American delegates are now at Stanmore where they will receive the British dominion delegates at luncheon tomorrow.

PORTER SEEKS DOCTORS' AID

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15. — The anti-narcotic bills introduced in Congress should command the wholehearted support of the entire medical and allied professions.

Representative Porter (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, made this statement in a letter to the editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"As the proposed legislation so jealously protects the medical profession, the honest, ethical and law-abiding physicians of the United States have nothing to fear from this legislation," Porter said.

An editorial in the current issue of the magazine criticized the bills as an attempt to set up "a narcotic dictatorship" in Washington that would interfere with the medical profession.

"Nothing could be more alien to the truth, as a reading of the bill will convince the most partisan-minded that it has been carefully drafted so as to prevent any semblance of bureaucracy," Porter wrote.

One bill is to create a separate narcotics bureau and provide a medical board to advise on the need for drugs, while the second will authorize the government to deny narotic licenses to dope addicts or person convicted of a narcotic crime.

N. Y. Police Frown On Cut Rate Taxis

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—(INS.)—New Yorkers who planned to taxi about the city today at the price of a good cigar were "stung."

The much-advertised 15-cents-a-mile taxicabs failed to appear on the streets, the operating company announcing police had not approved their low rate, one-half that charged by the other cabs. It was promised approval of the rate was forthcoming.

BLOCKING TRAFFIC — By Quin Hall

$1,700 STOLEN IN 5 HOLDUPS

County-wide search was being made by police today for bandits who obtained $1,700 in holdups of two drug stores in East Liberty, one in Wilkinsburg, a store in Bethel Township and a laundry in Lawrenceville.

Three clerks and five customers, one of them a woman, were forced into the prescription room of the drug store of Albert L. Berg, at 734 Rebecca avenue, Wilkinsburg, by three masked and armed bandits, last night.

VICTIM SLUGGED

Earl Swensen, of Irwin; Jay Painter, and Albert L. Berg, Jr., were serving customers when the trio, one wearing a mask and the others blue bandana handkerchiefs, ordered them into the room. While two of the bandits covered them with revolvers their accomplices rifled the cash register of $100. He returned to the room and robbed the woman customer of her purse and Swenson of $35. Swenson was beaten over the head when he failed to open a safe because he said he had no keys.

GET $1,300 IN BETHEL

An hour before four bandits invaded the drug stores of David Nathanson, at Wellesley and Highview avenues, and B. M. Ford, at Lincoln avenue and Rowan street. The cash register in the Nathanson pharmacy was looted of $65. In Ford's store the robbers obtained $150 from the register and $25 from Charles A. Brown, of 6621 Deary street, a customer, police reported.

Two bandits headed for Pittsburgh after holding up several persons in the store of Anthony Knaus, on the Bethel road, Bethel Township, with $1,300 they had obtained in the place.

Entering the Penn State Laundry, at 4505 Butler street, two armed bandits obtained $25 after holding two employes at bay. They escaped in a stolen automobile.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 15.—(AP.)—J. Marjorie Berger, Hollywood income tax counsellor, appeared at the United States marshal's office here today and surrendered to begin a prison sentence of two years and a half for making a false income tax return for Dorothy Mackaill, screen actress.

She was cheerful and smiling when she surrendered, and preserved her poise until she entered the women's ward of the Los Angeles County jail, where she broke down and wept.

Miss Berger's trial attracted much attention, and included testimony of many film notables, including Miss Mackaill, Dorothy Sebastian, King Vidor, Eleanor Boardman and Tom Mix.

the support of Allegheny County leaders for the vacancy caused by the death of Superior Court Judge William D. Porter that will be filled by the voters.

Locally the reported slate is regarded with misgivings as it omits William S. Vare, Francis Shunk Brown or any other comparable Philadelphian who might insure the support of the Philadelphia organization for the ticket.

URGE VARE WITHDRAWAL

Lewis conferred in Harrisburg for 30 minutes yesterday with Gov. John S. Fisher, but neither would announce the result of the meeting.

There has been friction between Lewis and Fisher for months over the former's vigorous opposition to the Governor's successful campaign for the 4-cent gasoline tax.

State Senator Samuel A. Salus, of the Philadelphia political "war board," today is bound for Florida to meet Vare and urge him, it is suspected, to withdraw as a candidate for United States senator in opposition to Grundy.

If successful, the Philadelphia leaders are said to hold hope that they can induce Grundy to ditch Lewis and accept Brown as candidate for governor.

Salus was in Washington yesterday and conferred with Secretary of Labor James J. Davis on "immigration." Davis is said to be willing to accept an indorsement from the state organization either for senator or governor.

Davis is reported as planning to leave Washington February 24 for a meeting with Vare.

DRY MEN SEIZE AUTO, ARREST 6

Six persons, including a woman, were arrested, an automobile was seized and five places were raided by prohibition agents yesterday.

Mrs. Stella Markimas, 21, and her husband, Joseph Markimas, both of 529 Chartiers avenue, McKees Rocks, were arrested, agents said, when their automobile, containing five gallons of moonshine, was seized at Forbes and Brady streets. Mrs. Markimas who, according to the agents, was driving the car, was released on her own recognizance while her husband was held in bond.

Battering down the door of a second floor club at 6117-19 Kirkwood street, after being refused admittance, a squad of agents arrested William Skiles, alias Skeels, they reported. Whisky was found in the place, the raiders said.

Eight barrels of wine were found on the fourth floor of a warehouse at Twenty-fifth and Smallman streets, but no arrests were made, the agents said.

Other raids reported, according to the agents, were on the saloon of Frank Ipavec, 37, at 5313 Butler street, and the homes of Harry Brown, at 3526 McClure avenue, and Guy Perry, at Hill street, Oak Hill, East Pittsburgh. Brown and Perry were released on their own recognizance. Ipavec was held in bond.

TRIAL OF GUARD IN DRY DEATH NEAR CLOSE

Defendant and Widow of Victim Give Different Versions on Auto Killing

DULUTH, Minn., Feb. 15.—(AP.)—Two versions of the killing of Gust Henry Wirkkula by a United States customs partolman last summer were before a federal court jury today as trial of the officer, Emmet White, neared its close.

The jury had the sworn testimony of White that Wirkkula was making an attempt to escape from White and E. V. Servine, another customs employe, as they sought to halt his automobile to search it for contraband liquor on a lonely road near Littlefork, Minn., 25 miles south of the Canadian border.

FIRED AT AUTO

Thereupon, White told the jury, he fired a riot gun furnished by the government, four times, twice in an effort to scare the driver, with the last two shots being aimed at the rear tires of his automobile.

White had no intention of inflicting injury when he fired, he testified in his trial on a charge of second degree murder. But he was unable to see the sights on the gun in the darkness and 26 to 36 buckshot from his gun struck the back of Wirkkula's car. No liquor was found in the car.

WIDOW'S VERSION

The other version before the jury was that of Mrs. Wirkkula who, with two daughters, was a passenger in the car. She said her husband slowed down in answer to a signal from the customs men. Three buckshot found Wirkkula as their target, and he was killed instantly.

Before the close of today's session it was planned to have the case in the hands of the jury, with Judge William A. Cant opening court early today in order to complete the trial before Sunday.

COUNTER MOVE OUTLINED BY DRYS

Irritated by Offensive Of Antis, Maine Man To Make Reply Today

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15.—Smarting under the constant hammering of anti-prohibition forces, congressional drys rallied today and promised to inaugurate a counter-offensive in the House.

Representative Beedy (Rep.) of Maine, was selected to take the floor for the drys and not only assail anti-dry claims that drinking is rampant, but defend enforcement as effective in a large part of the country.

Another militant dry, Representative Sproul (Rep.), of Kansas, also planned to take the floor to answer the speech recently made by Representative Schafer (Rep.), of Wisconsin, who declared the Bible approved moderate drinking.

BIBLE TALK STIRS ROW

The drys generally have been content to remain silent in the face of anti-dry activity in both branches of Congress. Beedy, one of the leading speakers for prohibition, took the floor recently to defend the Coast Guard after the killing of rum runners in Long Island Sound.

Sproul's ire was aroused by the Schafer speech. He announced the title of his own address as: "If Christ were on earth today as He was once in Judea, would He be a dry?"

The answer, Sproul says, is emphatically yes.

WITNESSES RALLY

Meantime both factions were rallying witnesses for the anti-dry bill hearings by the House Judiciary Committee next week. The anti-drys have called so many witnesses it is doubtful whether they can complete presentation of their case in the two days allowed.

Walter W. Liggett, magazine writer, who startled the committee with sensational charges on the first day of its hearings, is being challenged from all sides. He will be invited before the committee to defend them.

Gov. Fred W. Green, of Michigan, named by Liggett as an attendant at a "whoopee party" at a roadhouse outside Detroit, was to reach Washington today.

CLUE TO BANK CLERK FAILS

Failure of department store clerks to identify a faded suit of clothing as that bought more than a year ago by Harold Graham, Mellon bank clerk, missing since January 1929, indicated today that the body in an unmarked grave in Portsmouth, O. was not that of Graham.

J. H. Graham, brother of the mising youth, who brought the clothing here from Fairmont, W. Va., yesterday, was convinced that he must continue the search for his 19-year-old brother elsewhere.

WOOSTER, O., Feb. 15.—(AP.)—The entire official forces of Wayne County concentrated today in the hunt for the body of Melvin Horst, 4, of Orrville, O., missing since December 27, 1928, if two men now held here for questioning fail to reveal the location of the body, Special Prosecutor Walter J. Mougey said.

While Mougey and Prosecutor Marion Graves continued to interrogate Earl Conald and Charles Hanna, whose signed statements each lay the alleged killing to the hand of the other, numerous searching parties were following unreliable clues in the hope of finding the body.

The statements by Conald and Hanna said Melvin was killed in Orrville. No motive was given and both men denied knowledge of what had been done with the body.

Robber Grabs $5,000 Payroll At Detroit Institution, Struggles With Sister

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 15.—(AP.)—A robber held up the cashier's office in Providence Hospital at West Grand boulevard and Fourteenth street shortly after 7 a. m. today and escaped with a payroll of $5,000.

A number of nurses, other hospital employes and several carpenters and painters, who had been doing repair work in the hospital, were lined up before the cashier's cage receiving their wages. The robber, who was dressed in workman's clothing, was in the lineup. When he reached the cage he seized a box containing pay envelopes and, after a struggle with Sister Rosario, the cashier, ran from the building.

The robber did not draw a gun, although one of the sisters said she saw a weapon in his pocket.

EGYPT'S LEADING PILOT, MOHAMED SIDKEY EFFENDI, CARRIED ON CROWDS' SHOULDERS AFTER FLIGHT FROM BERLIN

Four Candy Stores Looted Of Valentine Day Cash

Robbers with an eye for the dollars that young swains invested in Valentine Day candy visited four stores early today and yesterday and ignored the sweets but removed approximately $1,000.

Three of the stores were Dimling's. At the Dimling shop at 6104 Penn avenue, the front door was forced and $30 stolen.

Two hundred dollars in cash and a cash register valued at $350 were stolen in the Dimling shop at Diamond and Wood streets. Some time Friday morning the shop at Oliver avenue and Smithfield street was entered in a similar manner and the cash register carted off.

Police who investigated the robbery this morning say that it was committed by two men in an automobile, who broke open the door of the shop. The counter was moved two feet to permit the men to carry out the cash register, police say they learned. It was estimated that $500 had been obtained by the robbers who looted the Oliver avenue shop Friday morning.

Robbers also broke into the store of the Gates Candies, Inc., at 966 Liberty avenue, during the night. So far as can be learned, nothing was stolen and it is believed the robbers were frightened away.

Cancer Victim, in Plane, Goes for New Treatment

Universal Service.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 15.—The "ambulance" airplane bearing Mrs. Irvin Edwins, near death from what has heretofore been regarded as an incurable type of cancer, arrived here from Wenatchee, Wash.

Mrs. Edwins was removed from Crissy Field in an ambulance to the cancer clinic established by Drs. Walter B. Coffey and John D. Humber at the Southern Pacific Hospital.

The plane was decided upon when Mrs. Edwins' physician, though recommending the journey to the clinic, said she would be unable to stand the trip by train. A swinging stretcher in the cabin, the plane, piloted by Charles Rector, took off from a snow-covered Wenatchee field at 8:05 a. m. Arriving at Portland at 11:30, Rector hopped for San Francisco 25 minutes later. At 4 o'clock the mercy ship of the skies halted briefly at Redding, Cal., took on gas and resumed.

Mrs. Edwins was accompanied by her husband, a wealthy rancher. He said she was "critically ill, but standing the trip better than expected."

Operated upon for cancer of the stomach last September, Mrs. Edwins had been failing steadily since. The Universal Service exclusive reports of the new experimental cancer treatment of Drs. Humber and Coffey were read by her husband and resulted in the long flight.

INSULL GROUP MAY GIVE AID TO CHICAGO

Ready to Join Strawn in Relieving Cash Crisis If Thompson Meets Terms

CHICAGO, Feb. 15.—(AP.)—The parade of the payless quickened today to the gestures of the rich.

In court, evictions of destitute city employes were denied; in the conference chamber, those who control millions prepared to listen to the pleas of those who want cash for the unpaid.

The payless centered their hopes on today's meeting of Mayor William Hale Thompson's committee and Silas H. Strawn and his relief group.

INSULL TO AID

However, a new figure climbed aboard the debt-laden financial cart as it lumbered conferenceward—Samuel Insull, utility magnate, who is said to head a group of millionaires ready to come to the aid of Strawn if Thompson's advisers enter into accord with the rescue group.

Strawn has declared that cash will be loaned only for employes of "essential departments," designating the police, firemen and health department employes; Mayor Thompson was just as emphatic in demanding that all employes receive full back pay and assurance of the same in the future.

Local banks, loaded with 1928 and 1929 tax anticipation warrants, have heretofpre refused to loan on the 1930 scrip, but Strawn and Myers disclosed that two of the city's largest banks have indicated a willingness to co-operate if today's conference ended successfully.

Highly Respected Official Disclosed as 'Romeo,' Chicago Authorities Say

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Feb. 15.—The four-year bank romance between Elmer D. Langguth, president, and his pretty 25-year-old cashier, Miss Laverne Lindgren, today was blamed for the sudden collapse of the People's State Bank of Maywood, following the girl's surrender to authorities last night.

The girl's admissions to the state attorney's office revealed a story of financial juggling of the bank's funds and clandestine romance in which Langguth showered her with luxuries, according to authorities.

Investigation of the bank's records shows that at least $200,000 has been taken through juggling of accounts. Langguth's family had been highly respected in the suburban community for years and no suspicion arose until the bank closed its doors last Saturday. Investigators estimate that Langguth's total spending during the alleged romance amounts to $300,000.

The luxuries afforded the girl, according to Pat Roche, state attorney's investigator, included a $35,000 residence for the girl and her mother, two automobiles and the maintenance of two richly-furnished suburban apartments under fictitious names.

Two months after he opened the bank Langguth met Miss Lindgren, she said, and invited her to take a stenographic position at the bank. Thereafter her rise to cashier was meteoric, investigation disclosed. She and the bank president shared a desk in common, it was revealed. Both Langguth and the girl were released under heavy bond.

KENNA'S ALLEY 'GIFT' VIEWED

Inspection of the "gift" by Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang, of nine feet of a 20-foot alley known as Brosius way, to Edward M. Kenna, county superintendent of roads, as a site for a gasoline station, was made by members of city council yesterday. They were President John S. Herron, George J. Kambach, Robert J. Alderdice, Clifford B. Connelley, M. J. Muldowney and Harry A. Little, Director Lang and Chief Engineer C. M. Reppert of his department, and Kenna accompanied the party.

It was said that Lang, with several of the councilmen, had decided to increase the gift from nine feet to 14 feet, which would make the value of the city property given Kenna $1,288. This would mean that steps which were to be erected for use of persons living in the vicinity would be built four feet wide instead of five, as would have been the case had the original grant been adhered to.

the streets before dark, but the Yellow cabs continued to operate downtown until midnight. Police reported they had not received a complaint since 6 o'clock last night, although extra squads were kept on duty throughout the downtown section until well after 12 o'clock.

KLINE STILL SILENT

Neither Mayor Charles H. Kline nor Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh has anything to say concerning the situation which has aroused citizens of East Liberty and Oakland to expressions of grave concern. Repeated protests from business men failed to bring any response from the city officials, other than excuses from the Mayor's office that he was ill at home.

Sheriff Robert S. Cain was still holding under advisement plans for the arming of deputies assigned to taxicabs. So far the company guards have attempted to cope with the situation armed only with riot sticks, but the sheriff indicated yesterday he was considering equipping the deputies with pistols and tear gas bombs.

"I would readily do so," the sheriff declared, "if the brick throwers could be seperated from the innocent by-standers and other non-combatants. Had my deputies carried firearms during the rioting of yesterday and the day before the East Liberty merchants and other business people of the city would have had much graver cause for complaint and newspapers would be carrying lists of dead and wounded."

STATE POLICE WANTED

Thus far no formal request for state police aid has gone out from the city, but from many quarters in the strike zone have come complaints and voiced hopes that the constabulary might be called before the situation should get too far beyond control.

Taxicab company officials had nothing to say concerning the burning of two cabs and wrecking of others yesterday. E. S. Higgins, president of the Parmelee Company, owner of the Green and Yellow companies, approached for a statement last night, declared, "We have nothing for publication tonight." Walter S. Laird, president of the Yellow, and Paul S. Houston, president of the Green, also were silent, desiring to add nothing to their formal statement issued yesterday.

Paul Toole, chairman of the executive committee of the Cab Drivers' Union, spoke with regret concerning yesterday's rioting.

REGRETS OUTBREAKS

"There is no need to reiterate our intention of conducting this strike as gentlemen," he said, "and I can only express my sincere regrets that the situation has resulted in injury to our fellow citizens."

Police investigation of the firing of the two cabs yesterday, revealed that neither of the machines was set afire by those responsible for wrecking them. In both cases, it was declared, the cabs were fired after they had been put out of commission and as far as could be learned the firing was done by bystanders.

F. C. Kersey, 31, of 905 North St. Clair street, arrested yesterday near the Green Cab garage on suspicion that he had stoned a cab, was discharged by Magistrate Charles Papale in East End police station, today. He was at once rearrested on a warrant issued by Justice of the Peace Margaret Morgan, of Sewickley, sworn out by Samuel Wallace, a cab guard, who caused Kersey's arrest yesterday. The latter is charged with malicious mischief.

Man Found Roaming About Plant Held

Charged with entering a building, Steve Davis, 34, of 1835 Elbow street, was held for the grand jury by Magistrate John Sweeney in North Side Police Court today.

Robert Ashworth, watchman at a Herr's Island plant, testified he found Davis in the building. Ashworth said for more than a month thefts of brass had been going on at the plant. Davis said he was a former employe. He was drunk last night, he claimed, and wandered into the plant.

MADRID'S FOOD SHOPS GUARDED

MADRID, Feb. 15.—(INS.)—Stringent measures were taken by the police today to prevent further riots and demonstrations by unemployed here.

With 10,000 unemployed persons wandering about the city hungrily searching for work and food, all food shops were heavily guarded and all attempted mass meetings barred.

Government officials charged that the demonstrations of the unemployed were instigated by political elements desiring to embarass the new administration of Premier D'Amaso Berenguer.

WILKINS OFF TO MONTEVIDEO

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 15.—Capt. Sir Hubert Wilkins returned to Deception Island, his base in the Antarctic, yesterday, after three weeks in the great ice sea to the south, and sailed immediately with his personnel for Montevideo on the steamship, Henrik Ibsen.

This word was communicated to the Examiner through KUP the San Francisco Examiner wireless station and the steamship, Melville at Deception Island.

The work of exploration is over for the present year due to unprecedented weather conditions in the Antarctic, Capt. Wilkins said.

The three weeks cruise through the ice sea with the S. S. William Scoresby during which the Wilkins-Hearst expedition was "lost" to radio communication was one of constant danger.

It was impossible to get in touch with the wireless base at Deception Island, Capt Wilkins said, on account of very unfavorable atmospheric conditions.

The cruise was one of terrific hardship and stormy weather with the Scoresby plunging through ice-crested waves which reached 20 feet in height, according to the message.

DUGGAN HEADS TRAFFIC BOARD

Effects of taxicabs on traffic conditions, and an election of officers featured a meeting yesterday of the Better Traffic Committee. Frank L. Duggan, president of the Consolidated Ice Company, was elected chairman of the committee. Others elected were:

Vice presidents, Walter Rosenbaum and E. Snodgrass, Jr.; treasurer, Frank J. Kress, and traffic engineer, Burton W. Marsh.

The resignation of Gen. A. J. Logan, former chairman, was accepted when it was explained that ill health prompted his action.

John M. Rice, chairman of the engineering sub-committee, gave figures on traffic insofar as it is affected by taxicabs.

According to figures gathered in a survey, taxicabs make up more than 8½ per cent of total motor vehicular traffic.

Speaking of "cruising" cabs, Mr. Rice said:

"One survey showed that out of 4,591 cabs counted, 76.7 per cent were empty. Of these 50 per cent passed the point of observation more than once."

Young Woman Takes Poison by Mistake

Miss Marie Horton, 28, of 504 Warfield street, was hurried to the Allegheny General Hospital early this morning, having accidentally swallowed poison in her home, according to a report at the North Side Police Station. Police say the girl took the poison, thinking it was medicine. After being treated at the hospital she was taken home.

DONOHOE DEATH FUND HINTED

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Feb. 15.—Was John Donohoe, former soldier and state trooper, killed by assassins hired for $5,000? This is the question asked by hundreds of persons who jammed the courtroom yesterday and heard witnesses, at the inquest, intimate that a jackpot of $5,000 has been raised for the brutal murder of Donohoe July 31.

Mrs. Glenn Allum, a trained nurse, of Washington, Pa., and wife of Glenn Allum, held for a month for questioning in the mystery and now serving a long workhouse term for his liquor activities, stated that A. E. Jones, special prosecutor in the Donohoe case, had suggested to her that five men might have contributed $1,000 each for the murder of Donohoe, and proposed that she see these men and have them take care of her.

The witness said that she denied any knowledge of such a murder plot and asserted that she knew nothing of the five men as suggested to her by Jones.

Heppenstall, president of the company, will be honored tonight at a banquet in the Heppenstall plant, Forty-sixth and Hatfield streets. The banquet marks C. W. Heppenstall's thirty-seventh year as president of the concern and the first anniversary of the introduction of the company's "cold furnace" process in steel manufacture.

Newsie, in Panic Gives Quarter To Bandits

Thirteen-year-old Joseph Lawrence who sells papers in front of the drugstore of Albert L. Berg at 734 Rebecca avenue, Wilkinsburg, probably was the most frightened of the nine persons victimized by the three armed and masked men who held up the establishment last night. Witnessing the holdup and hearing the shooting, Joseph was cowering by his stand when the holdup men left the store.

"Here's all I got Mister," Joseph said, holding out a quarter to one of the men.

"Quit yelping," one of the bandits said as he snatched the quarter from the boys hand. Giving the lad a push that knocked him to the sidewalk, the robber followed his companions into an automobile and sped away.

STUDENTS RIOT AFTER GAME

More than a 100 students of the Schenley and South High Schools met in a free-for-all fight at South Thirteenth and Bingham streets, following the victory of the South High in a basketball game in the South Side Market House, late yesterday, police said.

Schenley lost by a score of 36 to 20. The rivalry that marked the game had its climax in the street, a block away from the market house, when students engaged in fisticuffs, according to police.

South Side police under Lieut. Joseph Henigin responded to a call and quelled the disturbance in a few minutes. Several of the battered fans were taken to the police station, where they were allowed to wash and had their slight injuries dressed. Police then released them.

12 Valley Towns Celebrate Over New Street Cars

Thousands of citizens of the Allegheny Valley from Aspinwall to Natrona gathered last night to take part in the ceremonies marking the installation of 12 new street cars on the Valley Route.

It was the first public appearance of the new cars. One was stationed in each of 12 towns served by the line. On the side of each car was the name of the town for which the car was named.

Girls chosen by the municipalities were escorted to the cars. Handed bottles of ginger ale, they stepped forward, broke the bottles and named the cars.

Representatives of the communities, of the Allegheny Valley Street Railway Company, and the sponsors of the cars accompanied them. Displays of bunting and flags marked the route through the towns.

Plans call for exhibition of the cars from 1 to 4 p. m. toda.

Tomorrow, the public will ride free from 2 in the afternoon until 4 p. m.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Society Folk Hear Child Violinist

THE smart set may [illegible] and it may go, but the theaters and musicales and entertainments go on just the same. And not all the society [illegible] have gone yet and those [illegible] are showing the greatest interest in all things dramatic and musical. And before I begin to tell you about the [illegible] I saw last night at Syria Mosque hearing the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra and the violin player, Yehudin Menuhin, I seldom have I seen such enthusiasm displayed as last evening.

I saw Mrs. Frank W. Edmondson as she entered the Mosque and she was wearing a wrap of black broadtail and with her was her debutante daughter, Martha, and she was wearing a black crepe dress with a corsage of coral colored flowers. As she was leaving I noticed she wore a coat of black broadcloth with badger fur.

In the foyer I saw Mrs. Judge Edward Lewis wearing an extremely smart gown of cherry red crepe, with a deep V-decolletage and falling to the floor in a circular flare and she was chatting with Mrs. Brandt Smith, who wore eggshell satin very long. And Mrs. Lewis had chosen a wrap of black velvet with a deep cape collar of white fur.

And strolling in the foyer during intermission I saw Talbot Alexander Jewel Jarvis and she was wearing a charming gown with deep V-decolletage reaching the floor in back and it was of crepe in autumn leaf design in brown, tan and deep orange. As she was leaving the entertainment she was wearing a wrap of mink I noticed.

Mrs. Elizabeth Reed Brown was there, too, looking charming in a smart gown of black polka dotted lace, reaching the instep.

Then, too, I saw Mary Cuttler Lewis, who's the daughter you know, of the James Edward Lewises, and she was wearing tangerine crepe. You'll remember her engagement to Solon Person of Memphis, Tenn., was announced just the other day.

And Ellen McClay was there, too, wearing a gown of beige lace very long with full skirt. Her wrap was of King's blue flitted in white fox.

* * *

FROM the East comes a betrothal of folks well known here. The Charles S. Estabrooks of Syracuse, N. Y., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Elizabeth, to Charles E. Cooper, of Syracuse.

Do you know that Mrs. Estabrook was formerly Laura Curry, daughter of the late Henry M. Currys, of Pittsburgh? Mr. Cooper is the son of Mrs. Henry R. Cooper. He was graduated from Harvard in 1924. There has been no date set for the wedding yet, I've been told.

* * *

ANOTHER engagement comes from the East. Mrs. Lawrence Litchfield, of Winston road, Chestnut Hill, formerly of Pittsburgh, announces the betrothal of her daughter, Margaret, to Thomas Chadbourne Denton, of New York, son of the F. W. Dentons, of Haughton, Mich.

And the wedding will take place February 25 with only the two families present, because of the recent death of the bride's father, Dr. Lawrence Litchfield.

* * *

AND now I'll tell you about the people who are going and coming. Thomas O. McCutcheon, of Castleman street, Mrs. William C. King, of Shady avenue, and the W. S. Horners, also of Pittsburgh, are in Pasadena, Cal., spending the winter season at the Huntington Hotel.

* * *

AND I want to remind you about the Children's Hospital benefit Friday when Dr. Thomas S. Arbuthnot will give a talk in the evening in Carnegie Music Hall with his subject, "An African Hunting Trip." He will relate some of his experiences on his trip to the Veldt and jungle.

Among the patrons are Mrs. J. F. Robinson, Richard Beatty Mellon, W. S. Arbuthnot, W. S. McClintock, T. J. Gillespie, Jr., Dr. Thomas S. Baker, Miss Jessie Oliver, Dr. Fred M. Jacob, Mrs. C. H. Curry, Mrs. Stanley N. Brown, Mrs. Julian Burdick, Mrs. Dudley S. Liggett, Mrs. Matthew Taylor, Mrs. W. J. Holland, Mrs. Theodore F. Smith, Mrs. Frank B. Bell, Joseph H. Bulas, Dr. Harold A. Kipp, C. L. Pierce, Jr., Earl C. Gould, J. Henry O'Neil, T. Wright, H. V. Blaxter, H. L. Ringwalt, Mrs. George E. Shaw, Paul Dodds, M. N. Ballard, D. P. Bennett, Mrs. T. S. Anderson, Mrs. W. H. R. NEW TWEEDS SUIT EVERY COMPLEX AND COMPLEXION

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Feb. 15.—As far as the mode is concerned, we are under the friendly rule of Boss Tweed. This material is used for sports frocks, morning dresses, suits, ensembles for both town and country wear, with no end in sight to its popularity. Women stress the practical when choosing their clothes, which must not only be appropriately smart, but be comfortable and give good service. And surely tweed things gracefully fulfill all these requirements, especially is this true of clothes designed for strenuous service. Tweed, of a fine supple weave, is very good combined with fine jersey and will be much used this spring for practical wear in town as well as for resort wear.

The longer lines to sports clothes this year tend to give them more grace, without destroying the freedom of movement and ease which is part of their useful charm. Tweeds are very good in the warm tones of brown, brick and yellow, and the very artistic mixtures that are so suitable for town ensembles and country walking clothes. Crepes and woolens are used in pastel tones, so that there should be little difficulty in finding something to suit every complex and complexion.

THE sports outfit shown was sketched on the Croisette at Cannes, but first saw light of day in the Molyneux establishment in Paris. It is of reversible tweed in brick and beige, the brick side of the fabric making the jacket, the beige surface the skirt. The lower part of the skirt has a flounce with set-on box pleats of varying size, a very smart touch. The tucked-in jumper is made of finely knit beige jersey with a zig-zag line in brick. The jersey is also used for the facing on the jacket, lapels and cuffs, and for the belt on the skirt.

THE Jenny model, although sketched at Cannes, would look equally well in town. It is of dark brown and bright yellow tweed, the long, belted coat trimmed with beaver. The one-sided points at the back of the coat and skirt are trimmed with yellow galalith buttons. A yellow Shetland wool jumper completes the outfit.

MUSIC

Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra and Yehudi Menuhin

SYRIA MOSQUE

The Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra paid its annual visit to Syria Mosque last night, and was nearly eclipsed by the playing of the soloist, Yehudi Menuhin, the youthful violinist, who has set all the world of music wondering how it happens.

Henri Verbrugghen conducted, and gave us a program full of contrasts, though we have had "Die Meistersinger" frequently. It was not so thrilling an introduction as we have always expected from Wagner's overture, its slower tempo makes for greater sonority, less brilliance and humor. Verbrugghen's mastersingers and apprentices felt their sultry St. John's Day rather than the gayety in which they were soon to partake in the Nuremberg meadows.

J. Fred Lissfelt

His "Afternoon of a Faun" was more original than most readings. Verbrugghen making us feel not so much the decadent poetry of Mallarme as the spirit of antiquity. The orchestra was at its best in the Respighi symphonic poem, building a stirring and well balanced climax from the music of the canned nightingale through the march along the Appian Way.

And of Menuhin! Heaven forbid that anyone should speak of pizzicati or double-stopping, or cantilena or any other technical feats that make the great player, when speaking of this boy. Enthralled men and women simply sat dazed before his music, and the simple charm of his personality. How sacred a gift is housed within this little fellow! His tone is mature, impeccable, and then beyond all, it has that quality which speaks to the heart. His rhythms are irresistible. And he plays the Brahms Concerto feared for its difficulties by all violinists, overriding its pitfalls with rarest nonchalance. More than that, he has the understanding of a tried musician, and thereby may claim all the honors that are justly heaped upon him. The cadenza alone of the first movement had the resonance of a symphony. Altogether the performance might easily be the great remembrance of a lifetime.

This afternoon, the orchestra plays two novelties, "Pirt Hein," a Dutch Rhapsody of Van Anrooy, and Honegger's symphonic poem, "Pastorale d'Ete." Yehudi Menuhin will repeat the Brahms Concerto.

LOVEJOY

By BEATRICE BURTON

Aunt Em Refuses to Take Lovejoy's Baby

CHAPTER XXXIV

And a minute after that Lovejoy was at the telephone, calling Steve Oglebay's number.

"Hello, Steve," she said when he answered, but rushing on, "I want to ask you something and I want you to give me a perfectly honest answer. Steve, did you truly mean what you said to me the other night?"

"Every word of it," he said promptly. "You know [illegible] without asking. What's happened?"

Lovejoy [illegible] "Everything here has gone to smash," she told him, "and I wanted to be sure I could count on you—I'll call you [illegible] Good night, Steve."

She hung up the receiver and then she called a taxicab.

Ten minutes later she was on her way to Aunt Em.

She found her alone in the big homelike flat, with a glass pitcher of lemonade on a table beside her and a great pile of old newspapers on the floor at her feet. Aunt Em seemed never to find time to read the papers the day they were printed. She was always saving them up to look over on the evenings when Uncle James went out to his lodge meeting.

She was all excitement now over something that she had just read in a paper two weeks old.

"Dear, me!" she said to Lovejoy, looking at her from over the rims of her glasses. "They say that Lindbergh and that girl he's going to marry are at her father's home."

"Why, he's married her!" He married her a week ago!" Lovejoy interrupted her with a laugh. "Aunt Em, why don't you look over the papers when they come?—You never know what's going on in the world until it's all over!"

"Don't laugh at me!" snapped Aunt Em with a spurt of sudden anger. "If I want to read the news when it's a year old it's none of your business. There ain't been anything worth reading about anyway since the Queen of Roumania's trip to America!—Now, then what's on your mind?"

Breaks News

Lovejoy sat down on the stack of old papers as if it were a floor cushion. She clasped her hands with their pink glittering nails on Aunt Em's gray poplin knees.

"Aunt Em, I'm going to leave Tom," she said abruptly.

Aunt Em's glasses dropped into her lap and her mouth popped open with astonishment.

"God bless my soul!" she exclaimed. "Whatever foolishness is this you're telling me?"

Lovejoy shook her head. "It's not foolishness. It's the truth," she said. "We've been fussing and fighting with each other for months—and we've both come to the end of it. Things were bad enough before Norrie came to live with us—and now they're impossible."

"Norrie?" repeated Aunt Em. An I-told-you-so gleam came into her sharp eyes. "I just knew you'd be getting jealous of Norrie! I told James a week ago Sunday that I was sorry I'd ever suggested your getting Norrie into your house! And even he noticed that she never lets Tom get out of her sight. Poor thing, I'm sorry for her!"

Lovejoy went on with her story. She told Aunt Em about her meetings with Steve Oglebay and about the letters she had kept for Aline. She left out nothing, from beginning to end.

Aunt Em's eyes were bright with interest when she finished. Here was something that had the Queen of Roumania's visit backed off the map! Here was a news story right in the middle of her own family!—A divorce story!

But all at once the bright interest died out of her eyes and her lips came together with a snap.

Will Not Take Baby

After a moment or two she opened them with a question. "But the baby—what are you going to do about the baby?"

Ah, now they were getting down to brass tacks, thought Lovejoy. . . . Now they were getting down to the problem that she had brought to Aunt Em to solve for her!

"I thought perhaps you'd take the baby," she was beginning when Aunt Em stopped her.

"No, indeed, I shan't take the baby!" she snipped off the words with her thin lips. "I took you when you were a little girl, but I was young and strong then. I'm far too old to take care of a child now, and your uncle and I haven't much money. Besides, a child ought to be with its own mother!"

She stood up, groaning a little with the pain and stiffness in her old bones.

"No wonder you were so quick and airy about a divorce!" she said. "Thinking that all you had to do was dump the baby on me and rush off to tell the judge about it!—You'd just better think twice about leaving Tom, young woman! That blessed baby needs a home and it isn't its fault that its mother and father have been acting the fool!"

Aline Calls

The door of the room opened at that moment and Aline came walking in.

"Hello, Lovejoy!" she sang out in her bright cheerful way, shutting the door behind her.

She stopped short in the [illegible] of Lovejoy's bed [illegible] "Why, how do you do, Mrs. [illegible]! I came over to [illegible] what happened [illegible] I feared and [illegible] Did you have to tell Tom about it and my not [illegible] Did you tell him that those were his letters?"

Lovejoy gave her a [illegible] look. Didn't Aline realize what a dreadful thing she had done when she walked out of the house? When she refused to tell Tom that those letters were her letters and not Lovejoy's.

"Yes, I told Tom that they were your letters—but he didn't believe me," she said with measured calm. "He doesn't believe me now. But it doesn't make any difference, he's angry with me anyway because he's found out that I've been playing around with Steve Oglebay. He says he's through with me—and I'm taking him at his word. I'm going to see a divorce lawyer today. There's no use in two people living the cat-and-dog life that we've been living lately."

Aline nodded her golden head. "I think you're sensible," she answered smoothly. "When two people don't get along the only thing for them to do is to separate. I know I'd leave Al in a minute if I stopped caring for him."

Lovejoy gasped. Why, how could Aline sit there and pretend that she cared for her husband? If she cared the least little bit about him she wouldn't be having all these disgraceful love affairs all the time, would she?

And yet I was running around with Steve all winter while Tom and I were living together, she remembered and her conscience gave her a brand-new stab. I'm just as bad as she is—

Tom Returns

Aline was lighting a cigaret, scratching the match along one side of Lovejoy's shining new bedside table.

"Where are the letters now?" she asked. "I'd like to get them."

Lovejoy stared at her blankly. "Why, let's see. Tom must have them," she answered vaguely. "I seem to remember his picking them up and putting them into his pocket last night."

Aline jumped up from the bed.

"Well, I'll go down to his office and get them from him!" she cried. "Do you suppose he has them with him?"

Lovejoy said she didn't know where they were. She added that she didn't care where they were.

* * *

When Aline was gone she went downstairs and made herself a cup of coffee.

She went down the backstairs so that she would not have to say good morning to Norrie, who was sitting in the living-room with the baby.

Then she went softly upstairs again and took her bath. She took a long, leisurely one, using plenty of verveine bath salts and an enormous bar of French bath-soap that she paid a dollar for.

Her red hair was lying on her temples and forehead in damp little rings and her cheeks were flushed when she went back into her room to dress.

She opened the door. . . . And there, on the edge of the bed where Aline had been sitting an hour before, [illegible]

Harry Underwood Comes to Madge's Rescue

MANY times in my life have I had reason to bless Harry Underwood's resourcefulness and his unfailing looking out for me. But never have I been more thankful for his kindly [illegible] as I was when he interrupted my agitated speculations as to Hugh Grantland with a burlesque offer of his own services in attending to Jack Leslie.

With an apparently careless phrasing of his offer, he made it appear that my nervousness was caused by Dicky's news that the cabaret dancer was in New York and had nothing to do with my fear that something had happened to Hugh Grantland. Whether or not Dicky believed [illegible] I could not tell, but at least Mr. Underwood's little speech had made it possible for me to face and [illegible] him with the eager gratitude with which I normally would have responded to his offer of aid.

[illegible] more than relieved my [illegible] mind. I could [illegible] laughing at his [illegible] phraseology. I admit that the very thought of Jack Leslie in the same city as Mary robs me of all sanity.

I sent a furtive glance in Dicky's direction, but he was glowering into the fire, apparently paying no attention to our colloquy. Across his bent head I telegraphed my thanks to Mr. Underwood, but he shook his head slightly, his eyes looking dubiously at Dicky. I was furious with myself for the inadvertent reference to Hugh Grantland which I could see had roused my husband's angry jealousy. I no longer needed to wonder when the first rift in our revived happiness would come. I told myself bitterly. By my own folly of speech I had shattered the unflawed happiness which had been ours since our reconciliation. Dicky's jealousy of Hugh Grantland dated back to the first years of our marriage, when as Lillian's assistant I had been associated with the brilliant young army officer in wartime secret service work.

With kaleidoscopic quickness my memory unrolled pictures of my long friendship with Hugh Grantland. More than once during the war he had saved my life and then had come the deed which made Dicky and me his debtors for life. With infinite patience, cunning and resourcefulness he had tracked Grace Draper after her kidnaping of my baby son and restored him to Dicky and me. Never after that had Dicky spoken of Hugh as "Faithful Fido," the sneering appellation which frequently had been upon his lips before that episode. But his really sincere gratitude to Hugh had not cured him of his intense jealousy of the army officer whose hopeless devotion to me he had fathomed long before I guessed it.

My conscience acquitted me of anything warranting the jealousy of my husband of the hopeless passion which, after years of silence, Hugh Grantland had declared to me when he had misinterpreted my attitude toward my employer, Philip Veritzen.

"If you ever leave your husband you are coming to me, not to any other man," he had said hoarsely, but I had been able to convince him that there was no man in the world for me save my husband and he had gone back to his old attitude of unobtrusive but ever watchful friendship.

Never in all the years had that friendship faltered, never except in severe illness had he failed to send me a postal card containing any change in his address. Thus I always knew where to call upon him in any emergency, and it was this precaution which enabled me to send for him in the greatest crisis of my life—when Dicky, because of Grace Draper's plot, believed that I was trying to poison him.

He and his loyal Chinese friend, Lee Chow, had trapped Grace Draper and proved my innocence. Her suicide had followed immediately afterward. Then had come the revelation to Dicky that Hugh had not only cleared me of that awful suspicion, but on the same night had enabled young Noel Veritzen to save Dicky's lovely young niece from the hideous fate which Jack Leslie had planned for her in order to revenge himself upon Philip Veritzen, whose protege Mary was.

If ever one man owed gratitude to another Dicky was bound by that obligation to Hugh Grantland. But though he had not openly voiced his aversion since that last dramatic meeting over Grace Draper's lifeless body, I knew only too well that his gratitude was not proof against his jealousy, and I had wounded and angered him by my patent anxiety for my old friend.

There was but one possible course open to me. I must crush down all concern for Hugh while I was with Dicky. I sent another glance toward my husband's bent head, and decided upon a bold ruse to divert his attention.

"I am afraid Mary has met Jack Leslie," I said.

The ruse worked beyond my expectations. Dicky whirled his chair from the fire and spoke raucously:

"What do you mean?" he asked, then caught himself with a warning "Hush! Hush!" as Mary pushed open the door.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Unsung Chivalry

EVERY now and then I am amazed to observe the amount of gallantry and chivalry that still exists in this materialistic modern world.

* * *

In spite of all the discouragement they have received from flappers, gold-diggers, alimoniacs, and the militant feminists, most men are still chivalrous at heart, and gallant in their attitude toward women.

It is true that they are not all Launcelots, Chesterfields, or Sir Walter Raleighs. Chivalry is not always picturesque, dramatic and dashing. It comes disguised in many homelier ways, these days. But, it is the same old flower in less gaudy coloring.

* * *

For instance, some men are gallant enough to carry a heavy suitcase for a woman for blocks, while others take it out in carrying a heavy insurance for her, for life.

* * *

Some men pay a woman graceful compliments — while others merely marry her, and pay her bills and settle her charge accounts.

* * *

One man will send a woman roses and bonbons—while another will cheerfully put his nose to the grindstone to send her to Florida for the winter.

* * *

One man will relinquish his seat in a street car to a woman with a grand gesture, while another just gives up his Saturday afternoons and holidays to help her with the household chores.

* * *

Some men give a woman sympathy and tender words—while others get up in the cold at midnight and give her the aspirin or the electric pad or a dose of bicarbonate.

* * *

Some men will teach a woman to drive a car, with sweet and untiring patience—while others prefer to present her with a car of her own, hire an expert instructor, and pay the garage bills cheerfully, every time she smashes it.

* * *

Some men will gallantly take off their coats and wrap them around a woman on a chilly evening, while others show their devotion by paying the coal bills and spending all their Sundays and evenings struggling with the furnace.

* * *

Some men will fight for a woman's love—while others will gracefully relinquish it without a struggle, give her the divorce she yearns for, and pay the alimony without question.

NOT SO DUMB

By HELEN KLUMPH

From Marion Davies' forthcoming All-Talking Picture by Wanda Tuchok and Edwin Justus Mayer, based on the play, "Dulcy," by Marc Connelly and George Kaufman.

CHAPTER XII

GORDON was barely awake, but he realized that the ghastly strain of listening to Leach was over, and even in his slumberous state, he was conscious of Forbes, rising with a groan as he clutched his aching back. Gone were his hopes of interesting Forbes in his business. Financially, he was sunk. All he could hope for now was to protect dear little well-meaning Dulcy from the burst of rage that was sure to come.

Even Dulcy became vaguely conscious that her efforts to entertain Forbes had gone awry. She started across the room toward him, a little timid about making another suggestion.

"Mr. Forbes," she began reluctantly, "wouldn't you like to play a game of billiards?"

Forbes straightened up. There was a faint gleam in his eyes.

"Billiards!" he gasped. "Billiards! Why didn't you mention that sooner and spare me all this?"

Gordon beamed at Dulcy with a smile of forgiveness. After all, the day might be saved. Even Dulcy could guess right once, if she kept guessing long enough.

He didn't know that Fate was waiting in the billiard room, all ready to put out her foot and trip them.

Arm in arm Forbes and Gordon set out blithely for the billiard room. They were even cordial when Van Dyke asked if he might come along and watch.

Gordon pinched himself, convinced now that the nightmare was all over. Billiards would put Forbes in a good humor and he might talk business to him after all. The only disquieting thought that disturbed his serenity was that now that Forbes was out of the way, Dulcy would maneuver to throw Vincent and Angela together.

Gordon's Guess

His guess was right! The men were hardly out of the room when Dulcy spoke up brightly.

"I always say that one touch of nature makes the whole world something or other." It was growing late and Dulcy was running out of apt quotations. "Anyway, don't you and Angela want to go out in the garden and look at the moonlight?"

A moment later Dulcy heard Gordon's voice frantically calling to her from the billiard room.

"The balls? Oh, you want the balls to play with?" she asked, meanwhile wondering what on earth she could have done with them. As she hurried down the hall she called various suggestions as they came to mind.

But they weren't in any of the places she might have been expected to put them. Van Dyke, obligingly chinned himself on the beams of the low ceiling, pretending to look for them there, and Dulcy laughed obligingly, wondering why Gordon and Forbes didn't think it was the least bit funny. They seemed to take the whole thing so seriously.

One cupboard yielded old Christmas tree ornaments, another a set of checkers. She was just about to give up when she suddenly remembered that she had them in her darning basket. She had been using one of them for a darning ball! Forbes didn't seem to think it was the least bit amusing when she offered him a darning ball in place of the smaller ones he was accustomed to play with!

Game Starts

Gordon drew a long sigh of relief and motioned to Forbes to start the game as soon as she left the room.

Forbes was not a man to take any game lightly, particularly billiards, and when after a carefully calculated shot, the balls all rolled toward him, he looked on aghast. Again he placed them, and before he could take aim the balls wheeled about coyly and surged toward him.

He was beyond profanity; he was even beyond speech.

"Oh, come on," Van Dyke urged playfully, "this is lots of fun. You don't have to hit the balls at all."

"I'm sorry," Gordon apologized, "awfully sorry. Dulcy must have moved the table. And when she put it back she didn't get it quite level."

The one glimmer of hope that had momentarily parted the clouds overhanging Forbes' week-end had vanished, and as he stamped from the room he muttered, "That woman! She couldn't even leave a billiard table alone. She probably talked to it until it sagged from exhaustion."

It might have been better for all concerned if he had left the billiard room a few minutes earlier, or if he had never gone there at all.

When Dulcy returned to the living room a romantic scene met her eyes. Angela was clasped in Vincent's arms, and between kisses he was holding forth in the style of one of his own heroes.

"My love, my own!" he exclaimed, holding her closer. "You are wonderful. I have loved you from the moment when I first saw you."

Dulcy looked on delighted. At least one of her plans was working out properly.

"All that I am, and all that I ever hope to be is yours, all yours," Vincent went on. "Of course, I've knocked around a bit. Many girls have loved me, but ah! dear girl, you are the only one I have ever loved."

Suggests Elopement

Dulcy coughed nervously, hoping to attract their attention. She really felt that she shouldn't eavesdrop any longer, delightful as it was. But Vincent was embarked on a flood of oratory that nothing short of a fire alarm could quell.

Angela accepted his proposal so promptly that one of his most flowery speeches was cut short. But she was a little timid about agreeing to his proposal that they elope at once.

"But father—" she began.

"He wouldn't understand," Vincent assured her. "He does not know how our hearts cry out for each other. We cannot share our sweet secret with anyone like that."

"But we'll need Dulcy," Angela insisted.

At this Dulcy rushed into the room and flung her arms around Angela. Of course, she would help them. And, of course, she wouldn't tell a soul.

"But you should tell your mother," Dulcy exclaimed breathlessly.

A moment later Bill strolled aimlessly into the room, whistling as though he were not on his way to his own funeral.

"Oh, Willie," Dulcy blurted out, "What do you think? Angela and Vincent are going to elope."

They looked on in consternation.

"Oh it just slipped out," Dulcy explained. "I'm so excited over it. But you won't tell a soul, will you, Willie?"

Bill did not seem to share the general enthusiasm. And when Vincent went out in search of Mrs. Forbes he crossed over to Angela with an air of nonchalance that any less-excited person than Angela would have recognized as affected.

Bill Is Puzzled

In response to Dulcy's pleas he dully agreed to help them. He knew where they could get a license at that time of night. He would even drive them so as to bring Forbes' car back to him. Dulcy's as usual, was in the shop being repaired.

"All ready for the elopement?" Bill asked, jauntily.

"I think—you're just horrid," Angela blurted out, her voice almost breaking in a sob.

"I think I'm being very good to you," Bill told her seriously. "Helping you out this way."

"Well"—Angela paused to dab at her eyes with a handkerchief, "You don't have to be so happy about it. After all, you cared for me once."

Bill was frankly puzzled by her attitude. He wanted to take her in his arms and tell her that no man would ever care for her as he did. But romantic speeches were not in his line, and anyway, Dulcy, Mrs. Forbes and Vincent came rushing into the room with a clatter of excitement.

"Quick" Dulcy told them. "Your mother says she won't interfere. You'll have to pack your things at once. Hurry while your father is downstairs."

"I always say the less speed the more haste or something like that."

She sighed tremulously as she watched them hurrying upstairs arm in arm. She wouldn't let anything—anything interfere with their happiness.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Refusing a Friendship Ring

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I have known a young man for about six weeks. Within the last week he has left for an indefinite stay in the West. He has kept up a regular correspondence and in his last letter he asked me if he could bring back a "friendship ring," and if so, what would I prefer? Would it be proper for me to accept such a gift. If it is incorrect to accept it, what shall I tell him?

CURLY.

IT will not be according to the dictates of good form for you to accept the gift of jewelry from this man friend, unless you are engaged to him, and you probably are not, after such a short acquaintance. The fact that the ring is termed a "friendship ring" does not in any way change this ruling about a girl's not accepting jewelry from a man.

Putting this on a logical basis. Suppose that soon you meet the Prince Charming and he gives you an engagement ring. Wouldn't you be a bit embarrassed by this "friendship ring" and wouldn't it perhaps need some explaining?

Be quite honest with your friend, tell him that you appreciate his generous thought, but that you think it is better that you do not accept his gift of a ring. This will be even easier to write, than to say, to him, and I am sure that you can depend on his thorough understanding.

Leaving a Theater

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I would like you to advise me as to the proper way of leaving a theater when with a young lady. When rising from the seat, should the young man go first, or should the young lady precede him? R. W. V.

AS they rise from their seats, the man assists the woman with her wraps, and then he steps into the aisle, stands back a bit and helps her to come into the aisle. Then she precedes him up the aisle.

Horoscopes

Sunday, February 16

SUNDAY'S horoscope accents the prosperous conditions of church and charity, and points to activity and excitement generally. Sudden change is seen, with possible travel and new employment.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of conflicting conditions, with change, some advancement, but also some frustrated hopes and endeavors, and some slight unhappiness.

A child born on this day should be enterprising, resourceful and ambitious, but must work hard for its ultimate success.

Monday, February 17

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for promotion or preferment in employment, with favors or recognition from those in high places. Nevertheless, there is some hazard as to money and also a possibility of deception or misrepresentation, unless unusual care be exercised.

Those whose birthday it is may look for advancement or favors in employment, or some preferment or assistance from superiors. But they should be on guard as to fraud, duplicity, and should safeguard their finances.

A child born on this day may be clever and shrewd and should reach a high place in employment of others.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

The Penalty of Over-Dressing

COLD weather brings its burdens. We are young enough no matter how old in years, to enjoy the snow and sparkle of winter. But sometimes we like it better if we can look at its beauties through the window panes. The background of warmth promotes our enthusiasms.

DR. COPELAND

But, whether for pleasure or for duty's sake, we are driven into the cold air. Hustling along through the weather, it is not long before there is a glow in the blood and a sparkle in the eyes.

As I said, however, there are drawbacks to winter. As a result of the cold, or of the way we dress and eat at this season, there develop certain symptoms that are really disagreeable.

One of the most annoying is commonly called "winter itch." The legs and arms are the usual seats of trouble.

On getting ready for bed, almost as soon as the limbs are exposed, the itching begins. The terrible thing about it is that the more you scratch the itching place, the more it itches. It nearly drives you mad.

I need say no more in describing the symptoms. If you ever had Winter itch, no words of description are needed. If you never had it, of course you are not interested.

Why do people have this ailment?

The covering of the body is not the same for everybody. Some unfortunates have thin, easily irritated skins. They sunburn easily. The wind cuts and inflames the delicate tissue.

In Winter, the clothing, particularly the underwear, may be rough and irritating. It scratches and disturbs the skin.

Many persons dress so heavily in cold weather that an hour or more in the house may result in considerable perspiration. Then, on going into the cold, there is more or less chapping of the skin. This leads to soreness and itching.

Too much eating of pancakes, syrup, sausages and other "heating foods," may create such disturbances in the body as to cause itching and burning. The system becomes "acid." Then the skin becomes irritated.

Another thing: Not every brand of soap is good for every skin. The first thing to think about, if you have itching, is to inquire if your soap is "too strong."

It is amazing what relief may follow a change in soap. In severe cases, I have told my patients to use oatmeal water instead of soap.

Smearing the itching skin with petroleum oil, vaseline, cold cream, sweet butter, lard or ordinary cream may help a lot. But if these simple things fail, try mopping the itching parts with a solution of hyposulphite of soda, a tablespoonful to half a cup of water.

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 15.

FLYING to Claremore and run into a snow storm here and got set down.

"Sons of the wild jackasses," after six solid days of braying, were finally haltered by public opinion, and a twitch put on their upper lip to the score of Hughes 52, Jackasses 26. I hope Mr. Hughes don't prove as mean as they insinuated. They say he is all for the rich, that if appointed he would take the liquor away from the poor and give it to the wealthy.

Henry Ford has always had more common sense than anybody. The minute a boy comes out of college he is going to take him and educate him so he can make a living. If he can do that it will make him our greatest living American.

Yours, WILL.

OLD HOLLYWOOD LAW FORBIDS RABBIT SHOOTING FROM STREET CARS

By DOROTHY HERZOG

(Copyright 1930 by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 15.

IT was some 10 or 12 years ago, when a car-line first yawned down Santa Monica Boulevard that a law was passed forbidding the shooting of jack rabbits from the rear of a street car! The law is still in the City Hall of records.

Eleven or 12 years ago this Hollywood business wasn't. There was a village-Y embrace of ground called Hollywood. But that section rated third to Sherman and Cole Grove. The last two have since been absorbed into the one moniker Cole Grove was a large ranch, owned by Senator Cole. The former Christie studios, at Gower and Sunet, occupied a splice of this land.

Wesley Barry.

Wesley Barry, who is in his early twenties, is among the few active native sons. Wes' dad owned a restaurant across from the old Kalem lot. The Kalem lot (also on Sunset boulvard, near where Hollywood and Sunset merge), later became the site of Charles Ray's rise and fall as a star. Up the road a piece was D. W. Griffith's studio. Here, surrounded by orange and olive orchards, D. W. built the huge sets for "Intolerance," and later for "Birth of a Nation."

Wes was a kid of 6 when "Mickey" Neilan entered him into the flick racket. He knew the whole shebang of stars in those days. Most of 'em ate in his dad's restaurant. Ruth Roland, Louise Glaum, Carlyle Blackwell, George Walsh, et cetera.

Wes' dad, incidentally, had a chance to buy a huge orange and olive orchard in what is now part of the town's heart. He could have purchased it for $2,500, but he lacked about $500 of the amount demanded for immediate payment. Barry would be a millionaire plus, today had his father purchased that land.

Well, a guy can't always be right.

Hoot Gibson, f'r inst.

Hoot has a friend. The friend has a son. The son stutters.

Hoot has an airplane. He savvies that in many cases aeronautic drops have cured deafness. He figured it might cure stuttering. At all events, worth trying. The friend agreed. So Hoot and the boy took off. They dived in and out of clouds. Hoot soared to 10,000 feet and dropepd like a glunk to 3,000. He looped. He tail-spinned. He landed.

"How's it now?" turning to the youngster.

Marmont Living In England Now

WORD FLASHES from across ye Atlantic concerning Percy Marmont. Percy traipsed home to England a few years ago. He has returned to the colony to make a picture at intervals, but 'pears he's home to stay now. What with a town and a country house. A coupla cars. And his oldest son attending the British Naval Academy.

Customs Officer Halts Bushnell

Before Blanche Sweet motored into the brushy wilds of Californy, she trailed downtown and got herself a license to carry concealed weapons. Purpose: Shooting. Preferably game.

Blanche Sweet

Anthony Bushnell has learned 'tis wisdom only to cross a border if his passport accompanies him. Tony and Zelma (the boss) O'Neill traipsed to Caliente to see the green covered tables. Came time to depart. They did. On to the border, crawling form lies, in an endless, dusty automobile line. At the border, the customs officer took a hard glint at Tony. He became conversational. Always a tough break.

"What's your nationality?"

Tony was wrong before he answered: "English."

"Where's your passport?"

"In Hollywood," meekly.

"You come with me."

Tony got out of line and obliged. It took umpty ump 'phone calls to arrange finally for the passport to be airplaned to him. It arrived the next morn. Tony spent the night behind bars. Sherlock Holmes penetration revealed the customs officer had recognized him as the English hero in "Disraeli." More fun being behind bars, groans Mr. Bushnell.

Hum. Murder will out. 'Tis now known that George Fawcett writes poetry. Oh, George . . .

STAGE SHOWS AND NEW FILMS

"Journey's End," R. C. Sherriff's famous war play, will remain in the Alvin for a second and final week commencing Monday night. Seats now on sale for all remaining performances.

Ziegfeld's "Show Boat" returning to Pittsburgh following a two seasons' triumph in New York, will open a week's engagement Monday in the Nixon.

"Just Suppose," heralded as a romantic comedy, will be presented in the Pitt next week by the George Sharp Players.

NOVARRO COMING

When John Miljan and Ramon Novarro clashed swords during the making of M-G-M's "Devil-May-Care," which comes to the Penn Monday, it was not their first conflict of this sort. The two met as fencing antagonists in "Lovers," done some years back.

Five new songs and two old ones are featured in "No, No, Nanette," the all-talking technicolor production which opens a second week in the Warner today.

"The Love Parade," starring Maurice Chevalier and heralded as the screen's first original talking musical romance, will open a second week in the Aldine Monday.

"Chuck" Wilson, doing a "turn" with Joe Lang this week in the Winter Garden Roof, was featured for a number of years on the burlesque and musical comedy stages.

PREMIERE IN OLYMPIC

"Troopers Three," new Tiffany talkie, gets its world premiere on the Olympic screen today. The story concerns three actors who find themselves in the army for a three-year period, instead of a citizens' military training camp for 30 days.

Although admittedly dogs cannot climb trees, the clever way in which a canine with the Belgian Exploration Expedition ascends to a high point in the foliage to dislodge a leopard that has perched there, is shown in "Jango," Dr. Daniel Davenport's picturization of wild animals and human life in Western Africa, which ends it engagement in the Gayety tonight.

"The Grand Parade," a talk film that presents a story of minstrel life, opens today on the Harris screen. Victor Graff's new stage show is titled "In Holland."

MOTOR RACE, SCHOOL IN ENRIGHT

By HOWARD L. BROWNING, JR.

The old, old story of the "fixed" race in a hick town crops out again in the Enright. Mary Brian helps it along and Richard Arlen is a pretty fair crutch, too. And the movie makers call it "Burning Up."

Automobiles hold the spotlight, replacing the old horses. Arlen, heroing, is part of a crooked gang, staging races at county fairs. To the yokel who beat him, $1,000.

When the countryside is well sold on the racer, Francis Arnold, cross-country racer, breaks down in that town, challenges our hero, beats him. Back-stage, big wagers have been laid by the confederates against Arlen. They clean up.

But the poor boy falls in love with the daughter of the town's money bag. Twenty-five thousand dollars is what her sire stakes on the racer. So the race becomes a real one, for the hero could never take the old man's money like that—not in a movie.

Before the race is over and Arnold runs into Arlen, knocking him over the finish line, the audience is holding onto its seats.

Jay Mills is no slouch in "School Days" on the stage. Nor is the chorus. School days is an old subject for musical—or otherwise—revues. Everyone has seen scores of them flounder in silly, wishy-washy jokes, and in uncouth antics of self-conscious comedians. The Enright is to be thanked, then, for booking a show of this type with some really refreshing humor, few old jokes, and, blessed above all other virtues, naturalness—even in the first performance. Bobbie Gilbert is a good fiddler, a better comedian. Mills does a good dance and disappoints by not singing through a megaphone.

Man About Town

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.

CECIL BEATON, of Britain, who hocus-focuses the celebrated of the stage and screen with his $5 camera, and has the portraits published in Vogue and Vanity Fair, feels simply wretched about his recent pilgrimage to Hollywood . . . He went there, it appears, with the express aim of snap shooting the elusive Garbo, and to adore her at close range. But Greta, who isn't at all hi-hat, but who Just Can't Be Bothered, couldn't be me. And Cecil so groaned in Dinty Moore's corned-beef-and-cabbage place on 46th Street the other after-theater-time. Perhaps when Garbo comes to Manhattan again, Mr. Beaton will meet her. Via the only New Yorker, who possibly could arrange it . . . Robert Reud being the siren's only contact when in New York—who knows where she dwells. When she arises. When she retires or this and that . . . It is all so weird.

PEGGY WILL MOVE

PEGGY JOYCE will tenant elsewhere upon her discharge from the hospital . . . The night cashier at the Christopher Street Station of the I. R. T. subway plays a banjo when not making change . . . The Fred Stone return triumphant was best summed up by G. Gabriel, who put it this way: "Stone Gathers No Moss" . . . The local Orientals migrate to Newark on the Sabbath, one taxi firm averaging over 1,200 Chinese passengers, these calls, turned into gold, supporting 30 cabs of the company . . . Phyllis Povah has reconsidered matters and has called off her Giant escort from thrashing commentators who offend her with printer's ink . . . The Thomas Edison sign at Sixty-sixth and the Grandest Canyon, which features the inventor's likeness, hasn't been lighted for at least a month.

HARRY NOT CURED

HARRY THAW confines his play-boying to the hide-aways, seldom frequented by the Park Row prowlers and apparently is not cured of being "clipped" by night club hostesses who take matters to court and win huge sums . . . Vaudeville certainly cannot be in a bad way, considering that the specs are getting $8.80 for a duo of fifteenth row Palace Theater pews . . . It is worth that tariff, however, with such stellar stars as Fanny Brice, Adelaide Hall and Phil Baker on the same menu . . . Robert C. Benchley wishes it published that he is "that way" about Mrs. Benchley . . . Mrs. Reginald Fellowes, best remembered over the report that a jealous wife attempted to hurl acid at her in Yurrup, has penned a lengthy and erotic poem, which she threatens to have put between covers even if she pays the bill.

LAST BIG SPENDER

THE last of the Big Spenders has wearied of giving away a $1,000 bill to the cafe entertainers . . . Instead, he presses one of them into a pretty gel's paw the first time he meets her, and never refers to the gift again . . . "Paula Stone is so pretty . . . She is being adored here and there . . . The Chila Villa, an all-night tamale place, is enticing People Who Matter, who crunch crackers and doonk crullers in tasty lava after Curfew time . . . The lad who had his skull crushed in a cafe because he dropped a chunk of ice down a strange woman's gown was intoxicated, of course . . . A grand commentary on the current brand of gay goo . . . He never touched likker in his life, his intimates vow, and this is what happens . . . Too bad . . . He probably won't survive.

OLD PLACE NOT SAME

MRS. WILLEBRANDT may consider her last season Broadway encounter something to cheer about . . . It isn't the same old Stem . . . The cafe impresarios will tell you that "everybody's in Florida," but that is merely something to say . . . But one no-couvert gay place is thriving, because it offers a diverting floor show with undraped cuties . . . The other no-couvert spots are depressing . . . The Selon Royale, where La Guinan was once raided, enjoys the classier riff-raff and the stage favorites who find Florence and Sneeze entertaining . . . The rendezvous is doing a handsome trade, $4 week nights and $5 on Saturday nights being the entry fee . . . You bring your own canned heat, the management not risking "possession or sale," having escaped Atlanta via the miracle route . . . In sum, you pay as much as you would to witness a Broadway hit just to hear two ebony-skinned shouters shout and then press a bill into their paws when they warble before your table . . . However, you may rub elbows with Marilyn Miller, Adele Astaire, Libby Holman, a cinema person, a stage personality, and fear no disturbance about the Mayor's curfew law, the rendezvous being immune because it is in a hotel of over 50 rooms.

NO FLATTERING

ROBERT H. DAVIS, the grand old gent of the Sun, has loaned his collection of photographs of local somebodies to an art gallery at Fifty-seventh and Madison . . . Davis summoned the subjects to his office at No. 280 Broadway and sans artificial lighting "took you as you are" . . . when you least expected it . . . and there has been no retouching . . . He says that some day he will will them all to a museum or library so that posterity will be awed by "People As They Are Today." . . . The intelligentlemen of New York are heavily represented, all of whom autographed the likenesses, the outstanding inscription being that of Aline MacMahon, the play actress, who is pictured in the profile manner, but with her back showing. . . She scribbled: "To Robert H. Davis—the only man who ever turned my head."

DAME, NO DUMMY

HERE'S another caper in support of the rumor that ladies must live. The other midnight a top-hatted, tail-coated young man, despairing of getting a taxi, struck across town on foot, traversing one of the cross streets in the Sinful Seventies. As he entered a darkened area he was accosted by a hesitant young woman. She went into her spiel with the tremolo stop all the way out, and a mournful tale she told. "It's this way," she said tearfully. "I haven't had a bite to eat for 36 hours. My landlady has seized my clothes and unless I pay her something tonight I shall have no place to sleep. I have tried to get a job, but there is nothing for me. I can't go home to my people because they are too far away. The town has me licked and I'm ready to admit it. I want no charity from you, old boy. Just give me some money and I'll be a good sport. I can't go straight any longer."

Touched by her story, the lad thrust a big bill into her hand. "Good God, gal," he choked, "what do you take me for, anyway? I want nothing from you. Keep the money and take this advice. No matter how tough it gets, stay straight. It pays. Good night."

Thereafter for several days the benefactor went about with the glow that comes of a good deed performed. In fact, he might still feel like a Boy Scout had he not encountered the same lady a night ago doing the same act in the same doleful monologue.

He feels that the gel has been reading O. Henry.

WHIP, RACIAL WALLS IN STANLEY

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH.

Racial prejudices are juggled up and down for about seven reels on the Stanley screen in the new Richard Barthelmess talkie, "Son of the Gods," which opened yesterday. Like heavy plates, and pretentious moralizing, messed all over them, they fly about, some to crash earthward and smash, and others, never to be brought.

The fable, which originally was a Rex Beach novel, involves a plot that has to do with the romance between a highly cultured Chinese youth and a white and aristocratic American girl. Right from the start the honorable youth is on his guard against white man's prejudice. But the girl leads him on. He falls in love with her.

And then with Simon Legree cruelty comes the climax. All dressed up in a classy riding habit, Constance Bennett, as the heroine, comes stalking into a fashionable resort on the French Riviera and pelts the hero, Richard Barthelmess, across the face with her riding whip. "Wham, zhim, wham," sings the whip. "You cur, you Chinaman," cries the heroine.

THE USUAL CLINCH

So back to his Oriental teachings goes the Chinese youth. And you begin to get the idea that at last the movies have managed a pretty good drama for Mr. Barthelmess' talents. But you find you were premature. Trivial situations pile up and on the top of the heap lands the trivial end-finale, the usual movie clinch.

Of course public opinion and the censors would not approve a matrimonial blending of yellow and white. And the box office wouldn't approve separated sweethearts, so that was the rub. But the movie makers weren't as hesitant as Hamlet. They rushed in some anti-climaxes. They tried April Fool. So the hero remains, but the Chinese youth vanishes.

HURRAH FOR THE CAST

We can break into sincere praise for the cast. There is a significant depth about Mr. Barthelmess' work. He somehow gets a background of Chinese tradition and wisdom into his face. As for Miss Bennett she makes an effective heroine, but a heroine who challenges definition. Is it because of the actress' haughtiness? Or is it because she combines the cold reserve of Ann Harding with the warmth and reckless emotion of the late Jeanne Eagels.

"Modes and Models" on the stage brings Dick Powell and his band back into prominence. And they do well enough, too. Leading entertainers include a clever lad at the stepping and a comedian and comedienne who put over some funny chatter and a few vulgarisms. A feature is a real horse all gilded up like a new penny, which goes into some living statues and brings the show to an applause-winning finale.

Camera Question Box

The Sun-Telegraph's "Camera Question Box" each day will ask a question of public interest to Pittsburghers and will photograph those interviewed.

Today's Question: Political organizations in the state are now making their choices for governor and U. S. senator. Who would be your selections?

MARTY SCHUGAR, salesman, East End: "Most of the tentative selections so far seem to me pretty sour. Taylor, Pinchot, Lewis and Brown are not 'so hot' and have been in various offices too long. Gen. Edward Martin, chairman of the State Republican Committee, and who is a Washington, Pa., man, seems to be about the best man that could be selected as the gubernatorial nominee. For U. S. senator I'd select Joe Grundy, the big wool and yarn man from Bristol."

Marty Schugar

MRS. P. E. LEE, Duquesne Heights: "Well, James J. Davis is about as good a choice as any. Most people have had enough of Fisher and Pinchot. Give Davis a chance and I'm sure he'd make good at Harrisburg in the same manner that he has in Washington. He is favored by the laboring classes, especially. Pinchot would make a good senator. Those are my choices."

Mrs. P. E. Lee

THOMAS GOLD, salesman, East End: "I'm sick and tired of the present-day inefficiency of state politics. The men now in office haven't done a whole lot to improve conditions. I'm for Gen. Edward Martin, the local boy who made good in the big city, as O. O. McIntyre would say, as our next governor. He has a good war record and a lot of other things to fit him for the job. I'll be satisfied if Joe Grundy remains down in Washington as the next U. S. senator. He and Senator Dave Reed have the situation well in hand."

Thomas Gold

HERZL AMDUR, Olympic School of Dancing, Fifth avenue: "I'm sure that the Republican organization couldn't make a better choice than Jim Davis, one of our own Pittsburgh men. He would make a fine governor. He has done well in three cabinets, those of Presidents Harding, Coolidge and Hoover. I don't see why he would not do as well down at Harrisburg. Senator Grundy is doing well for Pennsylvania at Washington, and I think he should continue in office there."

Herzl Amdur

RUTH PASETTI, pianist, East End: "Samuel Lewis, who made such a success as treasurer of Pennsylvania has a big following of politicians and voters throughout the state. I think he would make a fine governor because he is really economical and efficient. Grundy has made an enviable record in his few months as U. S. senator. I think the wise thing to do would be to keep him in office at the Senate for the full term. Both, if nominated, should poll big votes."

Ruth Pasetti

OLIVE LIPP, proprietor, downtown: "About the best man that could be selected for governor would be James J. Davis, now Secretary of Labor. He has been a public figure for many years and seems to know what it's all about. He is honest, efficient and a man of purpose. Why not have him? For U. S. senator I believe Mr. Grundy, the incumbent, would make perhaps the best man for the job. He is capable in that office right now."

'Public Improvements Promote Progress'
Convinced that public improvements exert an important influence upon the progress of any community, the Board of County Commissioners of Allegheny County on January 1, 1924 initiated a program of major public works, many of which are already effectively serving the citizens, while others of vital importance are being rapidly brought to completion.
Pine Creek bridges Nos. 12, 13 and 14, in Shaler Township on the Butler Road, are being widened and improved due to changes being made by the State Highway Department on this important northern traffic route. TRADE GAINS OVER LAST MONTH

Total Volume Still Under Business of Last Year, Says Mercantile Agency

While there has been a slight improvement in the general trend of business, trade with both retailers and jobbers continues rather quiet, and the total volume of business is still lower than a year ago, according to R. G. Dun & Co.

A moderate volume of early spring buying is in evidence, but purchases as a rule are not for large amounts. Jobbers of men's and women's wearing apparel report sales somewhat below expectations thus far, but with a gradual improvement being noted. While there has been a slight improvement in hardware sales, business is still rather slow. Demand for lumber and other building materials is light, and building permits also continue at a lower rate than last year at this time. Jobbers of groceries and confectionery report sales still below normal and prices are also lower on the average.

PRODUCTION UP

Industrial operations are at a slightly higher rate but are still considerably lower than a year ago. Operations of steel plants in this district are estimated at about 76 per cent of capacity, with orders largely for immediate requirements.

Manufacturers of electrical equipment are operating at a comparatively high rate, with a volume of sales quite large. Demand for plumbers supplies and sanitary equipment is still slow. Production of crude oil shows some increase this week and prices of refined products also average somewhat lower.

Production of bituminous coal is averaging about 11,600,000 tons weekly and shows but little change from the rate prevailing a year ago. Competition for business continues very keen with prices unsatisfactory to the average producer. Western Pennsylvania grades of run-of-mine coal are quoted per net ton at mines as follows: Steam coal, $1.25 to $1.75; coking coal, $1.50 to $1.75; gas coal, $1.65 to $1.75; steam slack, 80 cents to 90 cents, and gas slack, $1 to $1.10.

Collections show practically no improvements, the average being considerably slower than normal.

TRADE RULES INCREASE

Progress in the establishment of better business standards is reflected in the gathering momentum of the trade-practice, which, according to the trade relations committee of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, is now in full headway.

During the past year 50 such conferences were held and rules were adopted by a wide range of industries looking to the abandonment of business practices which were a relic of the old days when anything was fair from a competitive viewpoint.

The indications are that during the current year the number of trade-practice conferences will be larger than the preceding year. Organized business is now directing its attention to methods of enforcing the rules agreed upon and giving full force to this new law merchant which is gradually being formulated.

MARSHALL BROTHERS' FIRST SHOP

ORIGINAL PLANT OF MARSHALL BROTHERS, PITTSBURGH FIRM, IN OLD DIAMOND ALLEY

FACTORY USED 75 YEARS

The history of the Marshall Brothers Company, makers of elevators, goes back to the earliest days of Pittsburgh's industrial life.

Twenty-seven years ago, when Diamond alley was widened from Smithfield street to the Market House, the Marshall Brothers Elevator and Machine Shop was razed to make room for the improvement of what is now known as Diamond street.

This building had stood for some 25 years before the improvement was made.

It is a very significant fact, that in this three-fourths of a century, no fire ever occurred on the premises, and no watchman was ever engaged. The greatest care was ever practiced in the prevention of fires.

It was the custom of the Marshalls, during these years, when the day's work was done, to lock the front door of the shop and deposit the key with Capt. Reed, who was then in charge of the police station, which was located directly across Diamond alley from the Marshall shop.

It is doubtful if there is a Pittsburgher living who remembers that on the site of the police station just referred to there was a tannery.

KNEW WM. TMAW

The late William Thaw used to tell, with very much pride, of his having, in those olden days, had many a wrestling match with the Marshall brothers in the yard of this tannery.

The Marshall lot is now occupied by the Frank & Seder store.

For many years the Marshalls manufactured tobacco press screws and steel vises for the southern markets, and machinery for rolling mills, principally housing screws and nuts.

These screws were made of forged steel, from 4 inches in diameter to 10 inches in diameter. The nuts for these screws were also of forged steel and sometimes of bronze, and weighed as much as 550 pounds each.

In addition to the manufacture of machinery, ornamental cresting or railing was manufactured for the roof of residences and other buildings, and this was followed by quite a large business in ornamental wrought iron fences.

MADE ELEVATORS

The beginning of the present extensive business in passenger and freight elevators was preceded by the manufacturing of hand power elevators, as well as belt driven elevators. The principal demand is now for electric elevators, both passenger and freight, as well as the automatic push button dumb waiters.

The Marshalls are now developing a new type of hydro-electric elevator which will supply a demand for elevators at a lower operating cost.

This progressive concern has installed a complete equipment for the manufacturing of tin clad fire doors, of all types, as well as tin lined fire resistive bins and tin clad shutters.

These fire doors are used as fire prevention installations, for elevator shaftways, stairways and partitions.

The Marshall elevator plant is now located on the South Side, at Twenty-first and Mary streets.

Retail Credit Data To Be Compiled

Current check on the trend in consumer buying and retail credit will be possible after July, 1930, William L. Cooper, director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, stated today in announcing that his bureau has found it possible to comply with the request of the National Retail Association to collect nation-wide reports on retail sales and credit trends semi-annually.

This decision, Mr. Cooper pointed out, follows a petition to the Department of Commerce by the association reflecting the wishes of a large proportion of the retail establishments of the country, which stressed the importance to business as a whole of making available this "extremely useful information" on a regular basis.

Transcontinental Oil Buys Leases

Transcontinental Oil Company has closed a contract for the purchase of the assets of Puhrman Petroleum Company for $1,050,000 cash and $450,000 to be paid out of one-fourth of the net oil production if, as, and when produced. Properties consist of 36,468 acres in Oklahoma scattered through Creek, Hughes, Seminole, Okfuskee, Pontotoc, Garvin, Pottawatomie, Lincoln, Oklahoma, Cleveland, McLain, Logan, Custer, Harper, Grady, Caddo and Canadian counties, and 2,185 acres in Saline and McPherson counties, Kan.

There is some production of oil and gas on a few of these leases at the present time estimated to yield in 1930 a net income of not less than $150,000.

SCHOOL OPENS HERE

The recent announcement of the opening of the Pittsburgh headquarters of the National Institute of Drafting in the Clark Building, Pittsburgh, has been received with enthusiasm. That this school is well equipped to train such young men for a career is evident to one who notes their exceptional facilities and plan of teaching.

The National Institute of Drafting as its name implies is national in scope. The executive offices in Cleveland are under the capable administration of R. O. Krouse, a recognized authority in this field and the Pittsburgh school will be directed by R. J. Pierson, who has for many years devoted himself to this work.

FILLS NEED

In opening a school of drafting in Pittsburgh, the National Institute of Drafting is filling a definite need. As the workshop of the world, the Pittsburgh area is in urgent need of hundreds of well-trained draftsmen. One needs but glance through the classified section of any newspaper to learn that there is a real and growing demand for skilled draftsmen at salaries that compare favorable with those of any other profession.

In training young men and women for this work, the National Institute of Drafting is preparing them for an excellent career that is both congenial and well paid, as well as one in which employment is more certain than almost any other field of endeavor.

INDIVIDUAL STUDY

Students at the National Institute of Drafting are afforded remarkable facilities for quick mastery of this interesting work and at the same time find that the system of small weekly payments makes the economic problem of tuition a simple one. There are no complicated methods at this school. The student learns by doing actual work and is further aided by personal individual coaching, so that progress is not dependent on the entire class, but rather on the individual. Beginner's courses enable the common school graduate to quickly master the fundamentals of drafting and advanced courses are valuable to high school or college graduates.

In this connection it is interesting to note that students at the National Institute of Drafting receive a free employment service that is in itself worth a great deal. Employers, too, find that this school is of value in supplying them with much needed draftsmen.

Utility Building Program Increases

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—According to information received by the National Electric Light Association from companies representing 85 per cent of the light and power industry, the total estimated expenditures for new construction already made or to be made by March 31 will be $198,000,000. This amount is 10½ per cent higher than the first quarter of 1929.

SAVINGS IN U. S. EXCEED OTHER NATIONS'

American Most Advanced Economically—Insurance Double Rest of World

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—Glib observers have characterized America as a nation of stock gamblers.

Such a description is far from complete, and is not supported by the facts. America is the most advanced economically of all nations, and exceeds others in per capita consumption and saving. The new volume of speculation is only one expression of economic wealth and leadership.

There is in America, too, a huge demand for the safer and sounder vehicles of thrift. For example, Americans carry twice as much life insurance as all the other peoples of the world combined, although the United States contains only one-sixteenth of all the world's population.

INSURANCE GROWTH

The total legal reserve life insurance in force in American companies passed $100,000,000,000 for the first time last summer when the great speculative bull market was nearing its peak.

According to William D. Van Dyke, president of the capably managed Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company, the second hundred billion of outstanding life insurance will have been written by 1940. In 1922, only $50,000,000,000 was in force; the amount outstanding accordingly doubled in the last six and a half years, as the public learned that the pre-war dollar had depreciated, and that accordingly more insurance was needed to give the same relative protection.

Even in the most excited days of bull speculation, the number directly interested in securities is small compared to the hordes of insurance buyers. The protection is distributed among 65,000,000 policyholders, and the average policy is for $1,540. Even so, Americans as a group are still conspicuously underinsuring their earning power.

INSURANCE FIRMS STRONG

Referring to the effect of the Wall Street debacle on life insurance, Mr. Van Dyke added:

"A conspicuous effect during the last year was the recent collapse in the stock market, which, however, had little or no adverse effect upon the investments of United States life insurance companies and in no way impaired their credit or financial standing.

"On the contrary, this shrinkage in the market values of certain securities has emphasized the financial strength of life insurance companies, the wisdom of proper legislative limitations upon their investments, and the fact of the stability and security of life insurance in contrast with the risks and uncertainties of certain other classes of investments.

"The noticeable effect of this drastic deflation has been to stimulate the purchase of life insurance to cover losses in less stable investments."

Life insurance of course constitutes a phase of the ballanced financial diet of every individual with dependents. There should be more voluntary and discriminating life insurance buying and less high pressured selling. The agent should limit his efforts to a professional service in suggesting a policy best adapted to the special needs of the insured. The great life insurance companies through advertising should break down the foolish popular prejudices against insurance and insurance agents. The older idea that taking out a policy is charity granted to the agent is being dropped, and the more intelligent are buying insurance from strangers who are equipped to give professional advice.

LOANS INCREASE

The increase of some $48,000,000 in brokers' loans is indicative of a gradual rebirth of the spirit of venturesomeness on the part of speculators, who were stunned but not cured by the late October-early-November debacle in Wall street.

The staid Wall Street Journal reads a lesson to big business executives who speculate in their own stocks. It approves permanent, outright ownership of such shares, but draws the line when it comes to marginal speculation or short selling, saying: "Stock ownership of an executive in his own company, which is bought and paid for, is a different matter. Its holder is under no necessity to unload, even in the event of an extended market decline, and no temptation to use false window dressing. He can live in and with his appointed tasks and single-heartedly serve his fellow stockholders. It must be accepted as a binding principle, particularly after the revelation of some shocking departure from it last year, that a corporation executive must not trade in his company's stock, either to sell it short or carry it on margin."

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

Forbes

Two Big Utility Leaders' Habits Differ Sharply

By B. C. FORBES

WALL STREET has been doing its bit to hasten the return of business prosperity. Average quotations on the New York Stock Exchange this week reached new high ground. Activity also has increased. Sentiment, too, has become distinctly better. Unless the advance should become wild, no fresh drastic setback is now regarded as likely. Timid souls who have been scared to make purchases find that their hesitancy has proved costly. Many good stocks still look cheap.

HENRY L. DOHERTY, of Cities Service, recently back from a long visit to Europe in search of health, intended to stay only a few days in New York and then proceed to Florida. He found himself so vigorous physically and mentally, however, and he found the business game once again so fascinating, that he has stayed on.

Although Mr. Doherty controls a hundred or more oil, gas and utility properties, he has always kept himself extraordinarily foot-free, leaving all details and routine managerial problems to his associates, notably W. Alton Jones, his head-in-command. Even before Mr. Doherty's breakdown, he would not visit his offices for weeks, although living in his unique apartment in the Wall Street district. He believes that company heads should think a lot, but do no work others can do. He therefore delegates responsibility and trusts his associates to function efficiently.

Mr. Doherty was the author of the idea that oil overproduction could be cured only by instituting "unit operating" for each oil pool, meaning that one party scientifically go about recovering of the maximum quantity from each reservoir and allot the results in proportion to the extent of the ownership of the different companies interested. He tells me that he still believes that until this is done the oil industry will continue over flooded with supplies and, more serious still, that our irreplaceable and vital supplies of oil and natural gas will be criminally wasted. The American Petroleum Institute has at last organized a "central committee on unit operation," having finally indorsed the principle at its December annual meeting. This committee's activities will be watched with keen interest.

Natural Gas has engaged Mr. Doherty's major attention for some time. He has been the moving spirit in building a huge pipe line to Chicago, where the gas is taken over by Samuel Insull to be used principally for industrial purposes and for enchancing the heat value of his manufactured gas. The growth of the Natural Gas industry lately has been phenomenal.

ANOTHER utility leader operates very differently from Mr. Doherty. Sidney Z. Mitchell, creator of Electric Bond & Share, and the genius behind scores of other important companies, is on the job every day and almost every evening until late. A giant in stature with a colossal brain, he carries in his head every detail of every company.

Induced to take a "rest" in Florida this month, he no sooner arrived there than he began to make the wires hum. Also, he promptly planned a tour of the state with a view to analyzing its utility possibilities on a previous "pleasure" trip to Florida, he had lined up various properties and knitted them together.

"I suppose," smilingly remarked a friend to one of Mr. Mitchell's chief lieutenants at headquarters in New York, "that Mr. Mitchell has established a branch office in Florida."

"No," came the reply. "Our headquarters are now in Florida. This is only a branch office."

And there was more truth than humor in that statement. To Sidney Z. Mitchell life is work and work is life.

TO EVERYONE in a position to employ labor: Stretch a point to have work done now.

There being more men than jobs at present, workmen will gladly give a full day's work. If unemployment is serious in many places at the moment, therefore, you will be relieving distress. By spring there may be as many jobs as men. Moreover, many materials are now relatively cheap. Nothing is to be gained by holding off. Sound business judgment, as well as humane considerations, should prompt immediate action.

The Charity Organization Society of New York, because of unemployment, had an increase in December over a year ago of 88 per cent in appeals for aid from families, while January brought a similar increase over a year ago. That there is need for giving out at this time all work possible hardly needs argument.

THINGS are on the mend. Let's all do what we can to hasten recovery's pace.

(Copyright, 1930, by B. C. Forbes.)

Honored

JAMES B. ECKENRODE

LEADS SALES FORCE

James B. Eckenrode, who has lead the 60 salesmen of the Holgar J. Johnson Agency of Pittsburgh for the Penn Mutual during the past two years, has again been given an outstanding distinction. Hugh D. Hart, vice president of the company, wrote him as follows:

"Again we must acclaim you the leader of the 6,000 Penn Mutual force in the United States for the year 1929 in the number of lives insured. The perennial winner of this honor and it is no small honor to lead the present force of the Penn Mutual agents."

Mr. Eckenrode entered the life insurance business in 1928 after having been for five years with L. H. Parke & Co. and prior to that time as assistant sales manager of Lutz & Schram.

In his first year in the life insurance business, Mr. Eckenrode insured over 400 people for approximately $1,000,000 and in the second year, 1929, his total production was $750,000.

During this time he has demonstrated by unusual performance, his right to the presidency of the Penn Mutualist Club, a national organization made up of all the outstanding representatives of the company.

LIMA DIVIDEND PREDICTED

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—Lima Locomotive Works, Inc., has close to $13,000,000 in unfilled orders on its books, compared with around $2,500,000 at the corresponding time a year ago. This backlog is sufficient to insure operations at their current rate throughout the first half of the year.

Company had a moderately good year in 1929, reporting net profit of $501,506 after taxes, depreciation and other charges, equivalent to $2.27 a share on the 211,057 shares of capital stock. In 1928, a particularly bad year for locomotive builders, company reported a net operating loss after charges of $111,605. Company omitted dividends after the second quarterly payment of $1 in 1928, management considering it better policy to wait until the dividend was earned, rather than appropriate funds from surplus.

Lima's financial position is strong and with the outlook for materially better results this year the management probably will consider placing the stock on a dividend basis again. Action along these lines may be taken in the near future.

National Dairy to Add Another Unit

NEW YORK, Feb. 15. — The National Dairy Products Corporation is seeking to acquire the Sugar Creek Creamery Company, of Danville, Ill., which owns properties in several states. National Dairy has applied to the New York Stock Exchange to list 20,400 additional shares of its common stock and $500,000 of its 5½ per cent debenture bonds, with which payment is to be made.

Air Brake Shows Gain In Earnings

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

THE Westinghouse Air Brake Company yesterday made public the greatest annual earnings of any year since 1926. Net profit after all charges for 1929 was $8,822,711 or $2.78 a share on the 3,172,111 shares of capital stock.

This compared with net of $6,490,557 or $2.04 a share in 1928 and represented a gain of 36 per cent. In 1927 the company earned $8,520,009 or $2.68 a share.

Net profit of $2,658,683 or 84 cents a share in the final three months of the year was the greatest of any quarter since the first three months of 1927. It compared with profit of $2,115,678 or 67 cents a share in the third quarter of this year and with $1,840,094 or 58 cents a share in the final quarter of 1928.

Orders Up 150 Per Cent

LAST year was marked by an almost uninterrupted upward trend in the company's business. Instead of this development coming to an abrupt halt in the final weeks of 1929 as did many other types of business, the gains were continued. At present the Westinghouse Air Brake Company has 150 per cent more orders on its books than at this time last year.

Profit for the present quarter is expected to be substantially greater than in the final quarter of 1929 and, judging from current business, the company has excellent prospects for showing a continued high rate of production during 1930.

Equipment Depression Ended

THE company is securing its increased sales through two different sources. Greater buying of railroad cars has expanded the air brake end of the business while the carriers have been increasing their purchases of signal equipment from the Union Switch and Signal Company, an Air Brake subsidiary.

The progress made in earnings since the demand for railroad equipment reached its most depressed stage early in 1928 can be seen from the following table of net profit by quarters for the past three years:

First	$1,924,893	$1,447,968	$2,802,799
Second	2,123,539	1,482,382	2,444,484
Third	2,115,678	1,720,113	1,735,825
Fourth	2,658,683	1,840,094	1,536,901
Total	$8,822,711	$6,490,557	$8,520,009

Surplus Increased

THE complete annual report, which will contain the balance sheet, will not be made public for several weeks, but it is generally expected that it will show an improvement to the already remarkably strong financial position.

The stock is on a $2 annual dividend basis. Payments for the year amounted to $6,344,222, which indicates that about $2,478,489 was added to surplus subject to any year and adjustments which may have been made.

The company did not make any additions to plants during the year of outstanding importance so that it is probable that this amount was directly reflected in either increased working capital or in new investments. At the close of 1928 the company had $41,299,792 in current assets against only $3,882,414 in current liabilities.

Wash Sales Deductible For Income Tax

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—Security losses from "wash sales" are held to be deductible for tax purposes by active traders in the market, in a very important ruling just issued by the Income Tax Department, according to J. S. Seidman, tax expert of Seidman & Seidman, certified public accountants.

"This ruling," Mr. Seidman explained, "completely reverses what was popularly believed to be the tax result of wash sales. It was generally taken for granted that according to the law, where securities were sold at a loss and the same securities repurchased within 30 days, the loss could not be deducted in the tax return. This provision in the law was regarded as limiting the meaning of another section that unqualifiedly allows losses incurred in a trade or business. However, the decision just released declares that the law is to be interpreted just the other way around and that business losses are not restricted by the wash sales section.

"Accordingly, the 30 day rule does not apply to a taxpayer who makes a business of stock market trading. To make a business of stock market trading does not mean that the taxpayer must be engaged only in that way. A person can have more than one business. Transactions entered into with sufficient frequency and regularity so as to distinguish them from casual, incidental activities would ordinarily constitute a business. The test applied is the number of transactions entered into, the amounts involved, and the time devoted by the taxpayer to market trading."

Mexican Eagle Oil Production Higher

LONDON, Feb. 15.—Production of Mexican Eagle Oil Company for week ended February 8 was 281,000 barrels against 281,000 in previous week and 253,000 two weeks ago.

Life Insurance Production Slumps

The volume of life insurance production for all classes declined 29 per cent in January, the Association of Life Insurance Presidents reported today. Ordinary insurance increased 8 per cent, but there were declines in industrial and group insurance. The total of the 44 companies represented in the report was $995,195,000 against $1,024,478,000 in January, 1929.

GENERAL TRADE LOWER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 15 — The volume of money turnover during the week ended February 8, as indicated by check payments, was greater than in either the previous week or the corresponding period of 1929, according to the weekly statement of the Department of Commerce. Steel-plant operations during the latest reported week were on a higher level than during the previous week but were below a year ago. The production of bituminous coal showed a decline from both the previous week and the same week of last year. Petroleum output was lower than in the corresponding week of 1929. Receipts of wheat and cotton during the latest week were considerably smaller than in the corresponding period of the previous year. Receipts of cattle and of hogs, however, were greater than a year ago.

The general level of wholesale prices showed a fractional gain as compared with the preceding week, but was lower than a year ago. Prices for cotton averaged lower than in either period, while prices for iron and steel and copper showed no change from the previous week. Copper prices were unchanged also from a year ago, while iron and steel prices were lower.

Bank loans and discounts at the end of the week were lower than at the end of the previous week, but showed a gain over a year ago. Business failures were more numerous than in either prior period. Stock prices strengthened over the previous week's level, but were still below the average of the corresponding week of 1929. Bond prices showed a fractional gain over the previous week but were below the level of a year ago.

SALES EXCEED MILLION

Allegheny County Memorial Park, Pittsburgh's new park-type cemetery, now under construction in McCandless township, four and a half miles north of the city at Duncan avenue and Thompson Run road, reports satisfactory business. On January 31 sales reached $1,000,000, which represents more than one-third of the total acreage of the property. Some 2,000 representative business and professional men of this community have bought lots in the park, either on the "before need" plan or as an investment.

An arrangement has been made so that in the event of the death of a lot-owner or any member of his family prior to the time his lot is ready for use, the company will accept the interment in a temporary burial place provided on the lawn adjacent to their property office on Duncan avenue extension, near what will be the main entrance. At the time this article was written 26 such temporary interments had been made. Funerals have come from all parts of the community and from as far away as Mars and Coraopolis. These bodies will later be moved by the Memorial Park, to the owners' lots when they are prepared to receive the interment permanently. Such removals will be made without cost to lot-owners.

Funeral services at the Memorial Park, even in such temporary interments, are conducted with becoming dignity. Only the most modern equipment is used. Every service includes the use of chapel-tent, processional, modern lowering devises, lawn and walk coverings and attendants.

Glass Bottle Sales Gain Over 1929

The glass bottle business presents nothing new this week so far as production and distribution are concerned. Activity, both in the manufacturing and distributing phases of the industry, is holding up reasonably well and if market conditions were equally good the industry as a whole would be in a satisfactory state. As it is, there is enough volume of business done to be fairly satisfactory, and with distributors is ahead of the business done in this period a year ago.

American Rolling Mills Planning Expansion At Detroit.

BUYING in American Rolling Mills is said to be coming from people close to the company. The company is understood to be planning an important expansion program near Detroit. The automobile industry is the chief customer of the company. C. R. Hook, president of the American Rolling Mill Company, announced that his company has arranged with John Summers Sons, Ltd., ter, England. The English plant ate as an "Armco" unit specialty sheet division of the Summers Company plant at Shotton, Chester, England. The English plant was designed and installed under a working agreement between the two companies. The British company is the largest producer of sheet steel outside of America and has been associated with "Armco" for some years through license agreements covering the manufacture of "Armco" ingot iron.

It is well known that the managements of the prominent corporations whose shares suffered so badly in the crash last fall, are very sensitive about it. This feeling is shared by their bankers. In other words the crash was a severe blow to the pride of many an executive and directors' board. The crash interfered with several plans for recapitalization and kept bankers explaining to stockholders for a long time. It was felt that the fall of the really good stocks was absolutely unjustified and served to shake confidence in securities of the country's most powerful corporations. These officials have not forgotten that the crash was exaggerated by short selling of the most vicious type and naturally should any shorts be unwise enough to get caught now conditions have righted themselves they could expect little mercy. It is believed the recovery of some of the most prominent shares on the exchange has done much to soothe the injured pride of those executives behind the shares. Any attempts to again unsettle the market would probably meet with stout resistance.

THE principal impetus behind the rise in stocks according to one Wall street authority, has been general investment buying, reaccumulation of the better class of stocks liquidated by investment trusts from the greatest amount of the cheapest money in the last two to three years, and also the steady recovery in general business from the recent let-down. The latter is best reflected by the steady increase in freight car loadings and the remarkable "pick up" in the steel and iron trade.

Trade and industry showed a steady and general trend toward improvement during the week, according to Bradstreet's. In some instances the gains were only slight. Mild weather furnished a stimulus to retail trade which appeared to be only slightly below the level of a year ago. Wholesale business displayed less actual improvement, but there was a little more optimism in evidence. Among the industries steel continues to play the most important part.

ONE good sign of the times is the apparent effort it is for bearishly inclined traders to find excuses for selling the market. In explaining the weakness in some of the chain stores and the mail order houses yesterday, some traders pointed to the large amount of unemployment in this country at this time. The unemployment, it is said, was among the ranks of those people who could be expected to patronize the cheaper class of stores. Immediately after the break, the chain stores were "bulled" on the argument that with the kink in the country's prosperity, the lower priced stores would get all the business. The weakness in the chain stores, says one broker, is possibly due to the small increase in sales reported for the month of January, compared with those of last year.

Several announcements encouraging to stockholders are expected to be made by the North American Company this year. In its preliminary report to be issued shortly, the company is expected to show approximately $27,000,000 available for the common stock for the full year 1929. The total electric output for the year was approximately 6,750,000 against 6,102,000,000 in 1928, an increase of about 11 per cent. The system will spend approximately $57,000,000 in new construction this year. The electric load of the system will be increased considerably shortly by the beginning of service on several new and large industrial contracts.

DIAMOND WORK SOON IN FULL SWING

TIME flies. With memories of the last world series still lingering, here's another baseball season at hand. The championship period itself is two months off, it is true, but it's practice time for the major leaguers. Donie Bush, former Pirate manager, now heading the Chicago Americans, hoists the curtain on the prologue to the annual pennant drama today by starting with his White Sox advance guard for the club's training camp at San Antonio, Tex. The Pale Hose battery men will be assembled in the Alamo City tomorrow and will be the first to begin organized work.

Donie Bush

The pitchers and catchers of the New York Giants are scheduled to appear in the same town on Monday, and most of the other clubs will follow the lead of the Bushmen and the McGrawites in short order. The vanguard of the Buccaneers will leave Pittsburgh Tuesday night, reaching Paso Robles one week from today. The Cub battery men start Tuesday for Catalina Island, arriving Friday. The first squad of the Brooklyn Dodgers will land in Clearwater, Fla., on Friday, and 24 hours later, the same day on which the Corsairs are booked to arrive on the Pacific Coast, the Washington Senators will gather at Biloxi, Miss.

ON February 23, the Yankees will detrain at St. Petersburg, Fla., and the following day will see the world champion Athletics reporting in Fort Myers (some of them have already started for that point), the Red Sox gathering in Pensacola, the Braves meeting Manager Bill McKechnie in St. Petersburg, and the Tigers assembling in Tampa.

The battery men of the Indians are to reach New Orleans on February 25, and on the same day the Browns will pitch their camp in West Palm Beach. A day later the first of the Phillies will put in an appearance at Winter Haven, Fla. All but two of the 16 clubs will have their early arrivals in camp before the end of this month. The exceptions are the Cardinals, who will report in Bradenton, March 1, and the Reds, who are to start work in Orlando on March 2. Ten teams will train in Florida, two in California, two in Texas, one in Louisiana and one in Mississippi. The estimated cost of these conditioning operations is an average of $20,000 per club, or a total of $320,000 for the two leagues.

THOUGH they have professed to feel very optimistic as to the possibility of Gabby Hartnett's being able to regain his old throwing form this year, it develops that the Cub bosses have not been taking any chances. They've been trying hard to land another experienced catcher.

Bob O'Farrell

Indications are, however, that they are not going to succeed. The man sought was Bob O'Farrell, of the Giants. John McGraw wouldn't listen to that, but came back with a counter proposition to make a deal that would send Frank Hogan to the Bruins. Joe McCarthy couldn't see Hogan at the price asked, so the whole thing is said to be as good as off.

PRIMO CARNERA'S next opponent in an American ring may not prove much tougher than the five whom he has already met, but at least he has a name that recalls a man who really could fight. He is Tom Sayers, Detroit heavyweight, billed to face the Italian giant in Minneapolis next Friday night. The original Tom Sayers was one of the best battlers of the old bare-knuckle days, only a middleweight in size but possessing sufficient ability to win the heavyweight championship of England, which he held from 1857 until he retired in 1860, a year before Jem Mace came into the title competition. In 12 years of fighting he was defeated only once, losing to Nat Langham in 61 rounds at Lakenham in 1853.

ONE of the most famous battles in the early days of the game was that between Sayers, an English champion, and John C. Heenan, claiming the American title, at Farnsboro, Eng., on April 7, 1860. The men fought 44 rounds, for $1,000 a side and the world championship, the mill lasting 2 hours and 20 minutes, and ending in a general row when the crowd forced the ropes.

The decision was a draw, and a prize belt was presented to each man in recognition of his courage and endurance in a battle that lived long in song and story. Heenan issued a challenge for another fight, but Heenan decided to retire at the request of friends, who presented to him a purse of $15,000.

THOUGH Waite Hoyt, of the Yankees, and Ed Morris, of the Red Sox, have quit the holdout ranks and penned their names on 1930 parchments, the list of unsigned major league pitchers is still unusually long, considering the nearness of training time.

Waite Hoyt

Not only has Burleigh Grimes failed to come to terms with the Pittsburgh management, but Adolfo Luque has returned his Brooklyn contract without a signature, and Dazzy Vance, Bill Clark, Ray Moss and Clise Dudley, of the Dodgers; Wesley Ferrell, of the Indians; Bill Walker, of the Giants, and others remain among the dissatisfied.

IN view of the continued failure of Grimes to reach an agreement with Vice President Sam Dreyfuss, of the Bucs, after a series of three conferences within a period of eight days, signs are beginning to point to Burleigh's being among the missing when the Pirate advance guard pulls out next Tuesday night for Paso Robles. The club official and the spitball hurler were still as far apart as the poles when yesterday's confab ended, it is said, and with both sides seemingly unwilling to yield an inch, the prospect of their arriving at an understanding at an early date must be admitted to be none too encouraging. Local fans had hoped to see Grimes enrolled in time to get the benefit of the entire training course, but unless one side or the other does a complete face-about in the limited period that remains—and the chances are against it—Burleigh will not be on hand when practice is started on the Coast.

CONFINING the athletic activities of college girls to mere intramural contests, as is done at some institutions of learning, is a mistake and should be supplanted by intercollegiate competition, in the opinion of Mrs. George T. Wightman, first famed in tennis as Miss Hazel Hotchkiss, and who was recently crowned women's national squash racquets champion.

"Intercollegiate competition is the only way to provide the real incentive to fight," she said in discussing the subject with Rose Teplitz. "Of course, intramural competition is perfectly all right in its place, but it shouldn't be made a substitute for the intercollegiate kind. It's the idea of winning for your college, or even for your high school or your prep school, that makes athletics popular.

"THAT'S what makes men's sports what they are today. Women are just beginning to assert themselves in the world of sport. They're just breaking into the sports pages of the dailies and letting the rest of the people know what's doing.

"Intercollegiate competition is the only thing that will enable

BREACH WIDENS BETWEEN STAR, LOCAL CLUB

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Professional and domestic tangles form a perplexing team that is apt to keep one Burleigh Grimes in Ohio next Tuesday when his Pirate buddies speed toward the California training camp. Rejecting quite flatly, as it were, a flat offer for 1930 made to him by the Pittsburgh officials, Grimes today is gone and there is no telling when his contract troubles will be aired again.

Burleigh spent most of yesterday in Pittsburgh with his attorney in the furtherance of his divorce suit. During the day he found time for a short conference with Vice President Sam Dreyfuss, but the negotiations apparently came to an end when the local magnate delivered what is supposed to be the limit, so far as the Pittsblrgh club is concerned. Grimes turned down the offer and the two sides appear to be far apart again despite their long and promising meeting of the previous day.

"We have no further appointments for salary discussions," said Dreyfuss, in touching on the situation. Sam inferred that any other contract moves would have to be made by the pitcher.

UPSETS PREVIOUS PARLEY

The son of the local owner, with Manager Ens, has been carrying on the negotiations with Grimes in the absence of President Barney Dreyfuss, who is on a health vacation in Florida. At the conference with Dreyfuss and Ens on Thursday, Grimes' case seemed to be well on the way toward settlement, but some sort of a hitch appears to have developed. Evidently there are contingent clauses that are objectionable to one side or the other.

Manager Ens is going ahead with his spring training plans as if everything were regular about the Pirate family. Jewel will lead the advance squad out of Pittsburgh, the party being due to reach Paso Robles Saturday. The second squad will head from Pittsburgh eight days after the departure of the advance guard.

BUCS' SCHEDULE CHANGED

The local office announced yesterday that the Pirates would make three one-day Sunday jumps to Brooklyn this year as a result of a permissable change in the National League schedule. The published draft of dates did not provide for the Sunday attractions, but the two teams got together and made the changes in their playing cards after securing the sanction of President Heydler.

The idea of the Flatbush jumps is not new, but it is the first time that as many as three of these flying trips have been arranged. The three dates are May 11, June 22 and August 17.

AMOS ELECTED WASH.-JEFF. COACH

WASHINGTON, Pa., Feb. 15.—William E. Amos, of this city, who shared the varsity coaching position at W. & J. last fall with Ray Ride, was elected head coach for the 1930 season here last night.

Announcement was made following a meeting of the athletic council at which time the resignation of Ray Ride, presented a few days ago, was accepted.

Amos, the new head coach, ranks as one of the most popular and brilliant athletes in gridiron history at W. & J. As a youth he enlisted for service in the World War, going to France and participating in some of the most terrific fighting in that conflict as a member of Company H, One Hundred and Tenth Infantry. In France he played on the Twenty-eighth Division football team, which was never beaten.

Enrolling at Kiski following his return from France, he performed brilliantly, and then enrolled at W. & J., ranking as one of the star fullbacks in four years of the local school. He was a freshman coach at W. & J. in 1928 and shared the varsity coaching berth with Ride last year.

PIRATES PLAY MAROONS TONIGHT

MONTREAL, Feb. 15. — Pittsburgh's badly battered ice Pirates, sporting a new losing streak of four games, will attempt to halt the fast-going Montreal Maroons, International Group leaders, in a National League game here tonight.

MAROONS FAVORED

The Steel City puckmen, who are bringing up the rear in the loop race, came here from New York, where on Thursday they accepted their second defeat in as many nights at the hands of the Rangers. Tonight's game will mark the last appearance of the Pittsburghers here this season, and the locals are heavy favorites to win.

The Maroons have downed the Detroit Cougars, 5-3, and the Rangers, 5-2, in their last two starts, and have lost only one decision in their last six skirmishes. Assured of a place in the Stanley Cup play-offs, they now are making ready to wrest the world title from the Boston Bruins in the annual post-season series.

BUC SQUAD DEPLETED

The visitors not only have a depleted squad, but are without their leader, Manager Frank Frederickson, who is scouring the mid-west in quest of new talent. Secretary Garry Schmeelk is at the helm during Frederickson's absence, and Hib Milks is directing the team on the ice.

The game here will be the fourth of the Pirates' present road trip, and they are carded to play in Ottawa Tuesday and Toronto Thursday before returning home. The probable lineup for tonight's game:

Penn State last night joined the rather extensive group of institutions which have taken it on the chin in a basketball way from Pitt, the Lions losing by a 47-20 score on the occasion of their annual appearance in the Stadium. It was Pitt's fifteenth win out of 16 starts, and State's fifth defeat in as many contests.

Niel Stahley

The Lions roared and frisked in very ferocious fashion for the first eight minutes of the ball game, and actually led Dr. Carlson's Panthers by 6 to 2 at that stage of the proceedings. But the well-oiled Panther machinery began to grind out points, much on the same order as a sausage machine is reputed to turn pooches of any description into fine, link bologna, and at half time, thanks to five field goals each by Les Cohen and Eddie (Straight Stud) Baker, Pitt enjoyed a 27-8 advantage.

STATE DEFENSE WEAK

Penn State employed a zone defense, which was helpless against the short passing, quick cutting

South reign drove another spike into its grip on first place in Section I of the City League yesterday afternoon and South Hills crashed into the lead in Section II as the league brought its next-to-the-final week of competition to a close.

South secured more than adequate revenge for the first half defeat suffered at the hands of the Bellefielders, scoring a 36-20 triumph on the Market House floor. The teams battled hip and tuck during the first half, South enjoying a four-point lead as the first two quarters were run off, but in the second half the attack of the Washabaugh - coached quintet began to hit regularly, with the result that the South passers pulled away from the hard fighting, but almost helpless Schenley team.

FIFTH AVENUE COPS

While Schenley was losing its second game of the week, Fifth Avenue climbed back into the running by defeating Westinghouse, 16-13. The Uptowners now have a mathamatical chance of over hauling South. Allderdice gave Peabody a tough battle, the East Enders finally winning by a 36-32 score.

South Hills defeat of the leading Perry team was the feature of the Section II program. The teams were deadlocked as the final period opened, but the Tunnelites moved out in front and remained there.

Oliver upset Allegheny, 29-28, as Freeland dropped in a successful free throw in the extra period.

Of the important local W. P. I. A. L. battles played yesterday, Etna defeated Oakmont, 24-16; Swissvale tripped Verona, 23-17; Bellevue downed Ben Avon, 12-11; Aspinwall lost to Edgewood, 19-12; McKees Rocks beat Mt. Lebanon, 26-11; Braddock bowed to Turtle Creek Union, 31-24; Rankin won from Norwin, 33-18; Homestead walloped Munhall, 25-13, and Stowe tripped Carnegie, 21-16.

Charleroi defeated Catholic High, 27-13, and the Duke Preps copped from Millvale High, 48-27, in other contests. The lineups:

FACIAL STUDY OF PHIL SCOTT

BOUTS SLATED IN DUQUESNE GARDEN

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

A new boxng club will make its appearance on the local scene a week after next. It will function upstairs in Duquesne Garden and plans to run a show every Wednesday night.

Nate Leff, former local boxer, and Johnny Ridge, of Oakland, will be the promoters. They had a session in the headquarters of the boxing commission yesterday at which details were arranged that cleared the way for the club to go ahead with the booking of matches.

It is estimated the hall will take care of between 1,500 and 2,000 spectators. The last fight held there was between Frank Moran local heavyweight, and Jack Geyer of Columbus, back in 1919, when Moran was trying a comeback.

MICKEY, GENE REMATCHED

Promoter Jim McGirr, of McKeesport, has rematched Mickey Solmen, of New Castle, and Gene Moretti, of Atlantic City, for his main bout next Thursday night. He had this battle in a few weeks ago, but Solmen was stricken ill and K. O. Kelly, Akron Negro, took his place on short notice and held Moretti to an official draw. Moretti showed enough against his awkward opponent to lead the fans to expect a good battle from him against a man of Solmen's caliber and McGirr appears to have made a wise move in putting the match back on the fire.

U. S. Carpentier, of New Kensington, boxes Midget Mike O'Dowd, of Louisville, in the 10-round windup of a show at Cincinnati tonight.

BERNARD AFTER RODGERS

Roger Bernard, of Flint, Mich., wants to box Jackie Rodgers here. He is willing to make 126 pounds to land the match. He holds victories over both Tony Herrera and Phil Goldstein, to both of whom he conceded weight.

Fritz and Elmer Anderson, brothers, of Detroit, are due to arrive here today to join the stable of Bernard Kelly, Jr., of McKeesport. They are welterweights. Fritz holds a decision over Young Rudy, scored at Salem, O.

Promoter Francis Flynn, of the Moose Temple, is at work on the preliminary card for his Young Joe Wolcott-Tom Malco show next Friday night.

CELTICS MEET PIERPOINTS

By TOM BIRKS

One of the feature tilts of the season will be staged this afternoon at the Homewood playgrounds, the Celtics and the Pierpoints clashing, with the leadership of the District loop at stake.

While the title will not go with this game, it is an assured fact that a defeat for either club will practically wipe out its championship aspirations. And it is going to be a battle of two hard-hitting forward lines. Joe Harbin probably will play center half to watch Barrett, the Celtics' sensational goal-getter. This was the weak position at Detroit when Cimerolli, with little experience tried to hold Vitzer, the best center-forward in the West.

Barrett will need plenty of watching in this battle. In the writer's opinion, Hynds is the man who does the damage for the Celtics, his crosses and flashes across the goal mouth certainly have a way of putting the opposing defense in a mess.

Tomorrow the fans will have a chance to see Thoms Run and the Heidelberg Eagles do their stuff for the second time this season in National cup warfare. Both clubs will be at full strength, and a good game should be staged.

PETE KILDUFF SUCCUMBS

PITTSBURG, Kan., Feb. 15.—(AP.)—Pete Kilduff, former major league baseball player and last year manager of the Alexandria, La., club of the Cotton States League, died yesterday following an appendicitis operation.

He was 38 years old. Kilduff played with the Chicago Cubs, the New York Giants and the Brooklyn Robins, climaxing his major league career with the Robins in the world series of 1920.

It was Kilduff who paved the way for the unassisted triple play of William Wambsganss, second baseman for Cleveland during the 1920 world series, the only three-ply retirement ever made in a world series. Kilduff had led off with a single in the fifth inning of the game Sunday, October 20, moved to second on another single by Catcher Miller, but was out when Wambsganss, making a remarkable one-hand catch of Pitcher Mitchell's line-drive, stepped on second before Kilduff could get back to the bag, then ran to meet and tag Miller, who was running toward second.

White Sox Start Journey Southward

CHICAGO, Feb. 15.—(AP.)—The journey southward—another active gesture toward making the Chicago White Sox' "era of new hope" an era of new prosperity in the American League—was on today's schedule.

The official party, which had dwindled to five athletes and the master mind force, along with some wives and children, was ready to leave at noon for San Antonio, Tex., where Donie Bush will attempt to fashion for the "Old Roman," Charles A. Comiskey, a team capable of finishing in the first division.

Five ball players gathered for the start from Chicago. Pitchers Bob Weiland, Ed Walsh, Jr., Gerold Bryne and Walter McCarthy and Infielder Bill Cissel were on deck, along with Manager Bush.

NET MOGULS MEET TODAY

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 15.—(AP.)—With the exception of one or two committee meetings to make final decision on moot points, all preliminary details have been settled for the holding this afternoon of the annual meeting of the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

The program calls for election of officers, announcement of rankings, selection of a city for the 1921 convention, awarding of tournaments and vote favoring or disproving the holding of open tournaments in which amateurs and professionals will be allowed to compete together.

Delegates apparently are generally favorable to "open" competition and with the expected approving vote today, the decision will be checked up to the International Tennis Federation meeting March 21 in Paris.

MONDAY—CHICAGO AMERICANS.

Long's Sport Comment

them ever to get anywhere near the standing of our male relatives. The big things in sports is to beat the other fellow. When it's your own you are competing against, the thrill, the keen fight, the all-absorbing interest is lost.

"WHAT'S the use of having championship hockey, basketball or tennis teams if there is no outside competition? With such a large percentage of girls attending many of the colleges and universities, it is rather surprising that intramural athletics is the condition existing at a large number of the institutions. There's probably a lot of hidden athletic talent within the walls of the colleges. These girls should be given a chance to show and develop their talents in intercollegiate contests." Mrs. Wightman has won no fewer than 31 tennis championships, a world record, but she says that fact does not lessen the thrill she gets out of any new success. "There's nothing that gives me the kind of thrill that winning athletic championships does," she said. "No matter how many championships I win I believe I'll always get a big thrill out of it. I've always felt that way."

Mrs. G. W. Wightman

LAST night's most prominent fistic numbers all ran true to the general dope, with Maxie Rosenbloom winning the decision over Ace Hudkins in New York, Mickey Walker copping the verdict over Leo Lomski in their non-title affair in Detroit, and Primo Carnera scoring his usual push-over against Big Tim Sigman, whoever he is, in Memphis. Rosenbloom's win assures that his promised match with Jimmy Slattery, newly-crowned champion, for the light-heavyweight title, will stand up. The judgment of the New York commission will be made to look rather punk if Rosenbloom, ruled out of the title reckoning some time ago, should now turn around and defeat the man upon whom the commission has placed the crown. And stranger things have happened.

The knocking off of five men in a row in one or two rounds by Carnera since his arrival in this country would be an impressive record if his opponents had amounted to anything, but inasmuch as the quintet was made up of such impossibilities as Big Boy Peterson, Elzear Rioux, Cowboy Owens, Buster Martin and Sigman, it will be seen that the whole performance would be nothing more than an afternoon's workout for a real fighter. That makes three in eight days and two in four days for Carnera. If the fans continue to bite probably he'll soon be playing matinees and nights. It wouldn't be a tough undertaking at that unless the supply of set-ups should run out.

THE election yesterday of William E. (Bill) Amos as head football coach at Washington and Jefferson did not come as a surprise, for, since the resignation of Ray Ride, with whom he jointly directed the Presidents' grid warfare last year, he was the logical choice for the job. A splendid chap, with an excellent athletic career of his own backing him up, Amos is well qualified to handle the reins at Washington-Jeff.

By JULIUS LEVIN

The J. J. Veronas, leading the Allegheny County League race by a margin of only a half game, face one of their hardest tests of the season tonight when they meet the Homestead Ackermans in a league fray at the Homestead Elks Hall.

The Ackermans, always noted for the style of basketball they display at home, are making a determined bid for the second half of the County League championship and they will strive to hand the Veronas their first defeat of the season. The Veronas lead the Goldensons by only a half game, having won four successive league battles.

The Veronas realize they are going up against a tough opponent in Moon Klinzing, Art McGuirk, Vic Dober, Scotty McGill and Whitey Littell and have prepared themselves accordingly. The Veronas likely will start the fray with Bill Miller, Johnny Serbin, Ski Twyman, Artie Hoffman and Dom Demaria, the five boys who have been playing brilliant basketball.

The Homestead Ackermans were in form last night and whipped the Allentown passers, 40 to 26, in their County League battle. The Penn Five set down the Falcons, 30 to 29, in a close West Penn tilt.

St. Wendelin defeated St. Joseph's, 39-38, and St. John's won over St. Henry's 36-35, in the Lyceum League. Real Estate won out over Dravo, 43 to 29, in the C. & I. circuit.

St. Paul's bowed before the I. K. S. Juniors, 50-16, in the Metropolitan league, while Hilltop "Y" beat Kingsley House, 28 to 22, in the A. A. U. tourney.

The Duquesne Lafayettes nosed out the I. K. S., 28 to 25, in an exhibition game in which Ziggy Kahn's club led most of the way. The lineups:

ROSENBLOOM WINS

BOXERS TRAIN IN NEW GYM

WILLIE SCOTT — YOUNG NANCI — BOBBY BURNS

The Progressive Club, of Homewood, has established modern training quarters, with full gymnasium apparatus, in its new clubhouse, 7136 Hamilton avenue. It boasts close to 200 members. Irish Chick Rodgers, former boxer, is the trainer. Photo shows a few of the boxers who do their conditioning there from day to day.

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—(AP.)—Maxie Slapsey Rosenbloom, of New York, has cleared the last obstacle in the way of his forthcoming title shot with Jimmy Slattery of Buffalo, recognized in New York state as light-heavyweight champion of the world.

Rosenbloom cuffed Ace Hudkins, Nebraska wildcat, dizzy in a rough and hilarious 10-round bout in Madison Square Garden last night to win the unanimous decision of the judges and the referee as well as the 17,000 spectators.

There was no question of Rosenbloom's superiority after the first two rounds. At the start Hudkins chased the Harlem light-heavyweight all around the ring and, although Rosenbloom was an elusive target, Hudkins landed enough blows to gain him the edge in both of the first two rounds. Then Maxie began to get going. He tugged and hauled the Ace around the ring, slapped him with lefts from almost every angle, led with rights that invariably found their mark and gave the Nebraskan a distressing time of it in general.

MICKEY WALKER COPS

DETROIT, Feb. 15.—(AP.)—Mickey Walker, middleweight champion of the world, made a successful invasion of the light-heavyweight ranks last night by decisively defeating Leo Lomski, the Aberdeen, Wash., Assassin, in a 10-round battle in the Olympia Arena.

Lomski was knocked staggering into a corner when Mickey connected heavily with a smashing right and left to the head and body. Walker opened up an old gash over Lomski's left eye in the fourth round and kept hammering at it incessantly thereafter.

CARNERA STOPS SIGMAN

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Feb. 15.—(AP.)—Primo Carnera, the Ambling Alp from Italy, needed only one minute and 35 seconds to dispose of Big Jim Sigman, of South Carolina and South America, here last night, landing only two light blows on his own behalf. Sigman was knocked through the ropes under a shower of rights and lefts and was counted out. The battle was attended by 10,000 persons.

GANS MEETS ABRAMS

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—(AP.)—Baby Joe Gans, Los Angeles Negro welterweight meets Joey Abrams, of Brooklyn, in the feature 10-round bout at the Olympia A. C. tonight. Floyd Hebert, of Cleveland, originally slated to meet Gans, has suffered an injury to his hand in training.

Sport Vignettes

Not all of the stuff you read about the holdouts causes the club-owners grief . . . . Some of it is cooked up by them and fed to the papers to keep the doings of the club before the fans during the off-season . . . . Often it is hard to tell the phoney holdouts from the real ones . . . A general hoorah always attends the finish of the bickering or staged bickering between player and magnate and the fans are pacified and the season can go on . . . . By the way, the Burleigh Grimes holdout has got to the serious stage with the club about to head for the training camp and Burleigh not yet in line . . . . The gulf between Burleigh and the local club looks like a brother to that between the striking taxicab drivers and the taxi owners . . . . Only difference is that nothing but verbal brickbats have been thrown so far . . . . Incidentally, the gent who missed your scribe by inches with a brick that he was tossing at a speeding cab in Grant street the other night can have the brick if he will call for it in person . . . . Or was he throwing at the cab? . . . . Have you joined the We Want Saylor Club that holds weekly meetings in the Moose Temple? . . . . Young Saylor defeated Tom Malco in the Moose arena some weeks ago, but Malco got the decision and attempts to rematch the pair have been made ever since but have been balked by Malco, as a result of which every time Malco's name is mentioned for a bout at the Moose the galleryites set up the cry of "We Want Saylor!" . . . . Saul Morris was seen to smile yesterday . . . . Must have received a valentine . . . . A party to Doc Carlson, the Pitt basketball coach, planned to toss for the scribes after last night's game with Penn State was called off because of the hot dog shortage . . . . You'd hardly know from the way the country is struggling along without assistance that there is a Sharkey-Scott bout scheduled for less than two weeks hence . . . . Two weeks is hardly far enough away, at that, and so is Miami . . . . Why couldn't they make Phil play that one on his home grounds in that dear ol' Lunnon town?

HARRY KECK.

LIONS FACE TECH FIVE TONIGHT

Panthers who employ the block to no mean end. Each of the Pitt players scored at least once during the first chapter. Lee, with two buckets, and Macomb and Saltzman with one each, accounted for State's points.

Lester Cohen's work was sensational, the hefty Pitt Center pushing in a pair of one-handed shots that were pips. He also tossed one from the center of the floor that carried nothing but good intention and a prayer, which swished through the net as the half ended.

Neil Stahley, captain of the Lions, was awarded the job of watching Charlie Hyatt during the first half and so well did he fill the job, and so tough were Hyatt's shots, that the Panther ace was held to a lone basket.

PITT ADDS POWER

Well, the second half opened, as second halves will, and Pitt put on added pressure. The score was run from 27-8 to 34-11, with Chipper Charlie leading the attack. Charlie threw himself five fine baskets during the second half. Eddie Baker garnered another, making him six, so that he and his captain tied for the scoring honors of the evening.

State got into the ball game somewhat when Moss, a substitute, twice cracked the scoring ice with baskets, and Macomb, making three out of three tried at the foul line good, and flipping through a basket, aided materially in chalking up State's 29 points.

Toward the end of the game, or after about 13 minutes of the half, Coach Carlson injected his reserves. Milt Cohen, taking Paul Zehfuss' place at forward, dropping in two field goals and a foul to lead the point getting for the reserves, or, as they are known to the initiated, Doc's Trained Seals.

Both clubs were away, away off on their foul shooting, Pitt made 3 out of 11 good, while State converted just one more. The lineup:

PLAY TECH TONIGHT

And so tonight we have the Lions putting on another show for us, trading clouts with Carnegie Tech in a return game in the Tartan gym. This contest is one of two booked for the city, the Dukes entertaining American University of Washington, D. C., on the Bluff.

American U, making its annual appearance here, will draw a good sized crowd, for in previous appearances in Pittsburgh, the Star Spangled passers have given excellent accounts of themselves.

GENEVA AT W. VA.

Aside from the two contests charted for the city, there are only three others listed for the section. At Morgantown, Geneva and West Virginia have a session listed. Westminster puts in an appearance in Washington, Pa., there to take on Wash-Jeff and West Virginia Wesleyan plays Glenville State Teachers at Glenville.

Carnegie Tech's freshmen swimming team engages the University School of Cleveland tankmen in a dual meet in the Skibo pool this afternoon. The meet is scheduled to begin at 2:30 p. m.

"Manon Lescaut."

This stirring work based on the love story by the Abbe Prevost brings to the microphone an imposing group of opera singers including, besides Miss Alda, Frascuale Amato as Sergeant Lescaut, the lieutenant's brother; Mario Chamlee as the Chevalier des Grieux, the lover; and Merle Alcock identified as the singer who interprets the Madrigal, and Giuseppe La Puma as Geronte de Ravoir, the treasurer general.

Gennaro Papi will direct the performance. The operalogue written by Robert A. Simon, will be read by Anne Harriton. An orchestra of fifty pieces will complete the full operatic interpretation of the work.

At Amiens Manon about to enter a convent meets des Grieux destined for the church. They fall in love at first sight and run away together. Manon proves unfaithful and goes to live with Geronte de Ravoir, a wealthy politician, instead, an old man. His brother has sponsored the intrigue with Geronte to flatter his own pulse.

Manon, though a coquette at heart, still loves des Grieux. He comes to the house and they decide to flee together. Bellcour, before he plans revenge. Manon's brother, who is responsible for her deception, rushes in to warn her that Bellcour is sending soldiers to take des Grieux. The soldiers come, but they take Manon, leaving des Grieux. Manon is taken to Havre to be sent overseas. Bellcour, Lescaut and des Grieux conspire to effect her rescue. They go to Havre and locate her in a barracks on the square. She appears at the window and there ensues the duet between Manon and des Grieux which is the brightest spot of the opera.

Shots are heard, the gates of the barracks open and a file of women in chains come forth. Manon is one of them. Des Grieux tries to rescue but fails. Then he parads with the captain of the ship, to be taken into exile with his love and gains permission. Together they board the ship and are taken to Louisiana.

ALWAYS DEAD TIRED?

How sad! Sallow complexion, coated tongue, poor appetite, bad breath, pimply skin and always tired. What's wrong? Chances are you're poisoned by clogged bowels and inactive liver. Take this famous prescription used constantly in place of calomel by men and women for 20 years—Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets. They are harmless yet very effective. A compound of vegetable ingredients. They act easily upon the bowels, help free the system of poison caused by faulty elimination and tone up liver.

Rose cheeks, clear eyes and youthful energy make a success of life. Take Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets nightly. Know them by their olive color. 15c, 30c and 60c. All druggists.

DAILY TRUE STORY

It Worked All Right

BERT INGALLS needed some thumb tacks.

He remembered them as he was passing a Fifth avenue store.

It was a wonder that Bert remembered anything at all, as he was greatly distressed concerning his older brother, who was in a hospital.

Bert was on his way to his little shop just off the avenue, where he dealt in etchings, old prints, autographs and such things as collectors pay outrageously big prices for.

He did [illegible] was [illegible] rected downstairs.

A girl was [illegible] hardware to a [illegible] man from [illegible]

Bert [illegible] girl. He stared at [illegible] red hair. It was red [illegible] not auburn or [illegible] very red and fluffy.

He stared so hard that he didn't [illegible] tomer depar[illegible]

Effie Rawlson owned the head of hair.

That was about all she did own except a few cheap dresses in the closet of the hall room that was her home.

Effie's cheeks paled [illegible] years of work in the basement of the store became [illegible] young man stared at her.

"Take a good look," she said.

Bert Ingalls' cheeks flushed red this time.

"I—I beg your pardon," he said and he smiled at her. "I came for some thumb tacks."

"I'm not a mind reader," [illegible] didn't mean to be rude." Effie said changing her voice quickly because the basement manager was approaching and she could not be rude.

She said [illegible] the thumb tacks.

"You look like someone I [illegible] said Bert.

Bert's Thoughts

Effie sighed and stared at him coldly.

"That line isn't good enough. It is too old," she said.

"You look like my brother's wife," Bert said hastily.

"I ain't crazy about your brother's taste," Effie answered and turned to wait on another customer.

Bert Ingalls went to his little shop. He sat at his desk in the back room and let Mrs. Harmon, his able assistant, run things. He was thinking about his brother, ill in a hospital, and about the girl in the store with the red hair who was a twin, in looks, to his brother's wife. His jaw set and a scowl appeared as he thought of his brother's wife. His face softened and a line of worry came again as he thought of his wealthy brother who had done so much for him.

Finally Bert Ingalls went back to the store and down to the counter where Effie Rawlson still exchanged odds and ends of things for nickels and dimes.

When Bert had the chance he handed Effie his card, saying, "Look here. I'm not trying to date you—I don't want to date you. But if you want to make a lot of money in a really honest way, will you tell me where I may have about ten minutes' talk with you?"

Effie looked at the card.

"What's your game, Big Boy?" she asked.

"Looks that way, but it isn't. I told you that you look like my brother's wife. I want you to pretend to be his wife for just about 10 minutes."

"That's a new one and a hot one," said Effie, "but I'm not pretending to be any man's wife, not even for 10 seconds unless I am. Here, buy something—the boss is coming."

"More thumb tacks. I can always use them," said Bert.

The boss moved on as Effie wrapped them up.

"Come to my shop, bring anyone with you—or I'll see you any place. I must tell you about it. I can't do that here. It's on the level—and a hundred dollars in advance."

"Nothing that hands a working girl a hundred dollars in advance is on the level," said Effie.

"Let me call on you and have your mother present," Bert pleaded.

Effie blinked.

"Lost her three years ago," she muttered.

"I'm sorry, Miss, but where can I see you?"

"Out front at 1:15—I have 40 minutes for eats." Effie surprised herself by saying. The young man's suggestion about her mother being present had won her.

Brother Ill

Bert Ingalls met Effie out front at the appointed time. He took her the half-block around to his shop. In his back office was a spread of coffee and sandwiches.

The door to his office was open and Mrs. Harmon and a few customers were all quite visible.

Bert produced two fifty dollar bills and put them on the desk.

"I'm going to take your word that, even if you won't do what I ask, you'll never repeat the strictly personal matters I have to tell you," he said.

Effie eyed Bert. She eyed the money. She picked up a tempting section of a tall club sandwich and said, "Shoot. I mean go ahead and tell me."

She blushed and murmured something about picking up a lot of slang in the store.

"Here is a picture of my brother's wife," said Bert, producing one.

Effie studied it in amazement.

"Can you tie that!" she exclaimed. "Honest, if she had red hair she'd be my twin—"

"Red hair photographs black—her hair is red, like yours," Bert said.

Effie nodded. "Sure, I forgot that. Well, what's it all about, Mr. Ingalls?"

"My brother is very ill in a hospital. He wants to see his wife."

At the Hospital

Bert called at the rooming house for Effie next day at the appointed time. When they reached the hospital it was Bert, not Effie, who was nervous.

They had to wait a few minutes in the hospital.

They were called to go up. Bert did his best; he breezed in cheerfully.

"Here's Maud, Jim—got here just as soon as she could," Bert said. He nudged Effie, who went over to the bed. She wasn't a bad actress at all.

"Oh, Jim — it's terrible. I couldn't get to you before," she said, throatily. She stared down at the handsome man and kissed him suddenly.

"I'll be back—you folks may want to talk about me," said Bert, stepping out after he had chuckled and then given Effie an imploring glance.

"I could have come two days ago, Jim, if sister hadn't been hit by the car. I had to look after her kids, you know," said Effie, remembering what Bert had taught her.

"Which sister, Maud?" he asked.

This nearly floored poor Effie. Why hadn't Bert told her about that?

"Why, Jim, you're awful sick, you can't remember," cooed Effie, trying bravely to stall.

"Yes, yes, afraid I have been all right, all right since you came. It was your sister, Mary, of course."

Fine Husband

"Of course it was Mary, Jim dear," agreed Effie, greatly relieved.

"I thought it might be Lucy, in New Haven," he said.

"No, it was Mary in Windsor." Effie was sure of herself at this time.

The nurse came in and said that Mrs. Ingalls would have to go." Bert came in to take her out.

"I'll be back as soon as sister is on her feet," Effie said when the sick man suddenly clasped her hand.

Outside Bert grabbed Effie's hand, too.

"It's a shame—think of a girl having a fine handsome husband like your brother and——"

Effie didn't finish it.

It was a few months later that Effie's landlady said that a gentleman was in the parlor to see her. Effie went down.

She turned pale when she saw Mr. James Ingalls there.

"I want to thank you, Miss Rawlson," he said.

"Your brother told you?" she murmured.

"He gave me your address. I knew you weren't my former wife now [illegible] saw you. And more th[illegible] my wife had no sister [illegible] in New Haven or any place. But you were wonderful just the same."

It wasn't Jim Ingalls' last visit by any means.

And when he proposed Effie said, "I should think you wouldn't take a chance on another red-headed wife—but if you don't I'll be heartbroken."

That was some years ago and Effie Ingalls, nee Rawlson, hasn't been heartbroken yet.

COOK-COOS by Ted Cook

(Copyright, 1930)

A Chicago building manager has found that for every four male hats removed in elevators one less passenger may ride.

The discovery seems rather unimportant, but many people will wonder how the experimenter managed to get four men in an elevator who would remove their hats.

* * *

He also contends that extra trips to pick up passengers crowded out by the hats cost Chicago office buildings $25,000 a year.

They could save money and help the cause by making the gals who inspire hat doffings to get out and walk up.

* * *

Any woman who makes four men remove their hats isn't safe in an elevator, anyway.

NO FLIES ON BILL!

(Lamar, Mo., Democrat.)

A Lamar man was talking to us, Monday, about Will Dunwoody, the rich Joplin grain dealer who used to live in Lamar. Bill's a hummer. He's the first guy in Joplin that got an airplane. You know, when Bill was here, years ago, he was the first one in town to get him a bicycle with a pneumatic tire.

To what do you credit your first divorce?

THE ANSWERS:

Salinas Fillmore, professional jury-man: I think the thing that turned the tide of battle was the fact that my bride planted ferns in my cuspidor.

Uganda Glitzelbaum, Ione wolf: We had been married a week. My husband was out every night. "Why don't you stay home?" I asked. "Why don't you go out?" he replied.

STRANGER THAN FICTION

(Redondo Breeze)

Whales are reported to be numerous off Point Vicente.

A. J. Salter reports while standing by yesterday a noise similar to that made by a huge electric motor startled him from his dozing.

Turning to see what caused the noise he perceived a huge whale within 25 feet of his boat. The sight came so suddenly Salter forgot he was a cameraman, and it was not until the whale had flapped his fins and dove for the deep, that a picture was shot.

Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph

BE A PITTSBURGH BOOSTER
To Your Friends in Other Cities

Justice Hughes Is a Typical Republican

The government of the United States is a government by big interests, for big interests.

The Republican party is a party of big interests, run by big interests, for the benefit of big interests.

President Hoover was the candidate of the Republican party. He was nominated by big interests.

The Senate of the United States is in the control of the Republican party, and the majority of the Republican senators are nominated by the big interests and represent the big interests.

The Democratic party in the Senate is in the minority, but many of its senators represent the big interests.

The progressives, the public officials who represent the citizenship, are in a minority in BOTH parties.

The reactionaries, the high protectionists, the special and favored interests, the trusts and monopolies, the international bankers,—in other words the big interests,—are in complete control of politics and of government.

Justice Hughes, whether a judge or a politician or an attorney for private interests, whatever he may be or may have been, or whatever you choose to call him, is a very able jurist. There is none abler in the whole United States of America.

The trusts and monopolies, the protected interests, the predatory interests, the privilege seeking interests, have all recognized this and have employed Mr. Hughes as their private attorney to further their private purposes.

Mr. Hughes has, therefore, obviously been affiliated with the special interests; but the Republican party has been so affiliated, and IS NOW so affiliated, and the ADMINISTRATION is so affiliated, and the majority of the SENATE is so affiliated, and everybody knows it.

So why should anyone imagine that a Republican president would make any other kind of a nomination for chief justice of the Supreme Court, or that the Senate would ratify any other kind of a nomination.

If the citizens of the United States do not like that kind of a nomination, they should not elect that kind of a president and that kind of a Senate—then they should not maintain the Republican party in power, and sustain a government of the big interests, by the big interests, and for the big interests.

That is the kind of government which the people VOTE for, that is the kind of government they GET, and presumably that is the kind of government they WANT.

Petition to Mayor To Act in Taxi Strike

To His Excellency, Charles H. Kline, Mayor of the City of Pittsburgh:

Does not your oath of office require you to cause the ordinances of the city of which you are the governor, and the laws of the State of Pennsylvania, to be executed and enforced?

Are there not ordinances providing that property and the persons of citizens be protected, and is there not state law against rioting and acts of violence?

Is not the bureau of police, department of public safety, explicitly charged with the direct duty of enforcing ordinances and laws relating to crimes, disorder and violence?

If it shall have failed, as it has in the cab strike, does not the responsibility for that failure rest upon you as prime executor and enforcer of the ordinances of the city and the laws of the state?

In addition to the explicit legal requirements attached to your office is there not also a paternal implication that requires you to be sympathetically concerned regarding the welfare and rights of all citizens who look upon you as their official chief?

Can a man be mayor of a great city such as Pittsburgh without assuming duties and responsibilities that are not encountered by the ordinary citizen?

When a crisis arises, involving strict enforcement of the law, is it not incumbent upon the mayor, the one man legally authorized to cope with them, to rise to the requirements of the occasion and conduct himself with relation thereto in accordance with the ordinances of the city and the laws of the state?

If the crisis be of an extraordinary nature, is there not also a requirement that prudence, common sense and love of fairness and justice be a guiding element in the composing of differences of opinion that may be the basis of such an extraordinary crisis?

Is it not a fact that men of great wisdom frequently have swept aside things in disputes that tend to confusion and have gone directly to the root of the trouble, and, by persuasion, have induced disputants to be quiet, resume relations and consider their problem reasonably?

Would it be against the dignity of your excellency to attempt to bring together the disputants in the present taxicab trouble and tell them they are making of themselves a nuisance that cannot be tolerated longer?

Cannot your execution of the policy of "to the victor belongs the spoils" wait for a day or two while you employ your friendly office as a mediator, if you will not employ your legal one as an executive, under the excuse that you are "neither a strike maker nor a strike breaker"?

This unsigned petition is the vicarious prayer of most of the citizens of the municipality which you govern.

The Real Stuff

It Has a Kick in It.

Staid Britons are hot and bothered over American talkies. Their newspapers object to the "vulgarity" of the speech in certain sound films. A question is asked in the House of Commons: "Whether in order to protect the English language the government will take steps to limit the import?"

The government, having a naval conference on its hands, declines to take steps just now, and meanwhile most of England continues to see the American productions and hear the mother tongue murdered. Still more strangely, it likes it.

In time, though, John Bull may get around to passing his own Volstead law against talkies from this side and we shall have to bootleg them into the tight little island. It would be interesting. You can imagine our British cousins surreptitiously buying a few cases of "genuine American accent, right off the boat."

Age and Employment

Maybe Golfing Ability Would Help.

Prejudices against employing men who have passed middle age are gradually breaking down. In fact, the American Management Association reports that it is easier for a man over 45 to obtain a job now than ever before.

"Age in numerous instances provides a positive argument in favor of employment as executives," J. P. Jordan, of New York, told the association at its Cleveland conference.

Now that is settled. Why doesn't somebody make a survey to determine how ability to play golf affects chances of employment as an executive.

"Bugs" Baer Says:

Lady Astor's Dress

LADY VISCOUNTESS MRS. ASTOR will give her historic dress to an English museum.

"Bugs" Baer

This was the famous uniform worn by the duchess when she made her first speech with gestures in the House of Commons.

The collection will be complete if Grover Whalen donates his perpendicular silk hat to the Hall of Fumes and Charles Dawes autographs his short pants for the Bureau of Weights and Measures.

If the dress had been a little older Lady Astor could have given it to her sister-in-law.

The costume is plain black with severe lines and would have to be altered for anybody with hips.

The styles today have changed since grandma smothered herself in furbelows and strutted with the other laundry bags in the annual Easter parade.

Modern ladies, like the Southern Railroad, are spending huge sums to eliminate the curves.

The time has gone when shapes were compulsory.

The son may be a chip off the old block. But the daughter is nothing more than a splinter.

Paris states that skirts must be worn 15 inches from the plowed ground. Men should be grateful that their only sartorial worry is whether to buy high shoes or wear spats.

The old-fashioned matron, with her billowing detours and wide, sweeping skirts is gone. Her place has been taken by a feminine masquerader who is neither an egg nor an oblong.

Well, fashion is fashion, as the old lady said when she filled in her wrinkles with putty and gave her face two rust-proof coats of red lead.

If Lady Astor can give her dress to a museum what's to stop Al Smith from creating an educational trust fund of brown derby hats?

PICKLES AND GHERKINS

By Herbert Kaufman

A GIANT and a pygmy differ only in SCALE: the one is simply an ENLARGED model of the other.

Both are identically ORGANIZED from head to foot.

The giant is merely a super-development of a STANDARD machine, just as a Percheron is a magnified pony and the dill pickle, a MATURED gherkin.

The trouble with most of us is that we don't GROW UP to our possibilities.

Great men, when analyzed, display few characteristics unpossessed by chronically obscure folk.

They scheme their blueprints on VASTER scales—think in BOLDER terms—contest in STERNER arenas, and fight through to the COUNT.

Five-cent ante and sky-high poker are played with like decks. And therefore call for an equal concentration of skill and finesse.

THEY are regulated by the SAME rules and consume the SAME time.

The "limit" is the decisive factor in the GAINS of each—the degree of the WINNING fixed at the BEGINNING.

The smaller the stake, the less chance for a killing. Fear clutches its nickels tighter than confidence holds its yellowbacks.

The WORST gambler is the piker who hasn't the courage of his aces.

Ninety-nine per cent of us never press our luck.

We under-bet UNBEATABLE hands and are satisfied to tug a random HAIR from Opportunity, when we might as EASILY snatch her BALD-HEADED.

If you don't win on the first deal, stick to your seat and draw until you DO fill. When they start to come your way, PLUNGE! Rashness leaves less in the kitty than TIMIDITY.

IF you're afraid to slip, you'll never rise. Speculate with your parent capital of energy and reason—the brain is a bank account that can't be gutted.

The oftener you check against thought, the faster its balance accredes. Paradoxically, one adds to mental reserves by subtracting ideas from them.

Failure can't endure except by SELF-CONSENT. Your natural capacities emerged as intact from the last SETBACK as they were at the OUTSET.

If you're fated to fall short again, you won't fall farther than BEDROCK. And that's precisely where you stood ORIGINALLY.

BUT when you cease to believe that you can STILL achieve as usual, then you really belong among the discards. And you'll STAY in the background until you re-grow a BACKBONE.

Any piano that can wail "The Miserere" is also keyed for "See the conquering hero comes."

The instrument upon which despair sobs the "Loser's Blues" will just as quickly respond with a triumphal march.

The executives who crack time-clock whips at your heels, determine your hours and set your wage, work with duplicates of your head tools. But they kept THEIRS clean and keen, and you let doubt and irresolution rust and dull yours.

They were lustier horn-blowers; they sounded their full scale of notes. They DIDN'T make life careers of penny-whistle jobs—or confine ambition to minor chords.

Take your share and take the maulings that go with it. Take EVERYTHING that BELONGS to you. Don't put up the shutters on a GOING concern.

Text for Today For as the rain cometh down, and the snow from heaven, and returneth not thither, but watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud, that it may give seed to the sower, and bread to the eater: So shall my word be that goeth forth out of my mouth: it shall not return unto me void, but it shall accomplish that which I please, and it shall prosper in the thing whereto I sent it.—Isaiah lv :10, 11.

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

BELOW the leaf-net is the stem supporting it and carrying various substances to and fro—water and mineral substances from the mining roots to the light-driven factories in the leaves, finished chemical products from the leaves down to the toiling tissues of the roots.

These are the broad essentials of plant anatomy. There are, of course, many other features, many variations on the scheme.

H. G. Wells.

There are, for example, parasitic plants, that find it easier to abandon the strenuous light-race and to suck the nourishing juices of their neighbors. The dodder is an example of such a plant; and the mistletoe is an interesting halfway house, battening on the labors of the roots of other plants, for mistletoe perches at the top of a high tree, and its roots, penetrating into the tissue of the latter, suck out the upward stream of moisture and salts for the mistletoe leaves to work upon—an ingeniously effortless way of coming out top in the light-race.

And the organs of plants may be turned to other purposes; the leaves may be hard and sharp to repel vegetarian animals, as in gorse, or the twigs may serve the same purpose as in hawthorn; there may be stores of food, like the swollen roots of carrots and beetroots and turnips or the bulbs made of fleshy subterranean leaves, of onions and tulips.

Sec. 2. Individuality in Plants.

What does it feel like to be a plant? It is very doubtful whether a plant feels anything at all.

The movements that plants perform—such as the turning of flowers and leaves toward the sun, the opening and closing of daisies, which depends upon the light; the opening and closing of crocuses or tulips, which depends upon temperature, or even the sudden swoon of the sensitive Mimosa pudica when it is touched — are brought about by processes very different from those occurring in our own muscle-fibers.

True, there are simple plants, as we shall shortly learn, which skip along by means of lashing tails like animalcules, and Dr. Bose, by using very sensitive apparatus, has detected quivers and shudderings in injured plants; but we may safely conclude that, even if a plant is conscious, its mind is something very different, very much more elementary, than the highly organized individual consciousness that we ourselves possess.

Calves'-foot jelly can be made to quiver; an automobile started on high gear shudders—shuddering by no means implies pain.

Looked upon as a cell-community, the organization of a flowering plant is somewhere about the level of Obelia in the animal kingdom. Obelia, we noted, is not a discreet, highly-specialized individual, but a mass of living tissue, growing and branching and throwing up polyps of various kinds without any very rigid order as occasion demands.

Vegetable tissue behaves in much the same way. The structure of a plant-body is by no means as stereotyped as the structure of one of the higher animals: a primrose does not have a fixed and invariable number of leaves, and the branching of elm-trees is very much more variable than the branching of our own arteries and veins.

There is an evident reason for this, for the plant can adapt itself to the particular conditions of illumination under which it finds itself, and grow in such a way as to secure as much light as possible.

Many plants grow and spread by means of creeping underground stems; couch-grass, for example, has a tough, rapidly growing underground stem that sends up a bunch of leaves and flowers from time to time, much as the hollow main stalk of Obelia throws up polyps.

The runners of a strawberry are similar, and the reader, if he or she has ever attempted to weed a garden, will be able to think of many troublesome examples of the same thing.

Moreover, it is a well-known fact that many plants can be reproduced by means of cuttings; in Begonias, for example, a single leaf or even a part of a leaf, detached from the plant will sprout out other leaves and rootlets, and reorganize itself into a whole plant, just as an isolated Obelia polyp will sprout out a new axis-tube and found a new colony.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—New York is seldom stirred out of sound sleep in the early morning hours these days by the rattle of milk bottles. There was a time in the memory of most of us when sleep after 6 a. m. in congested areas was impossible on account of the clatter.

Anti-noise societies have done much but chief credit is due to the improved morale of milk company employes. Those who deliver the milk today must go through a course of intensive training in the art of muffling sound. This schooling extends over several weeks.

Employes are instructed not only how to carry bottles into buildings without distributing tenants but how to set them down in the same fashion. One company provides rubber heels for its delivery staff and all are instructed to talk only in whispers in the halls.

Several of the more enterprising concerns have their horses shod with rubber tipped shoes and the wagon wheels are rubber tired. Customers are sent slips at intervals asking for a report of any infraction of rules for silence and spotters are also employed.

Incidentally, an adept milk deliverer on an independent route is highly paid. There are some whose pay runs from $150 to $200 a week. One of the most successful is a former circus clown, too old for his profession, who took a route as a temporary expedient and made more money than he ever made before.

With the Empire State tower arising on the site of the old Waldorf to its 85 stories, they are now discussing the probable 100 storied building. Yet skyscraper experts declare it will not likely be built in this generation. It has been proved that above the 75th story the return on the investment begins to diminish, due largely to the time required in elevator service.

A bird-like little man with a sill hat and whose coat tails flicked about with a sparrow's sprightliness minced up to me on West 44th street this morning and inquired: "Do you know anything about astrology?" I replied in the negative and after a few seconds indecision he said: "I thought not" and hurried on. Little mysteries like that, however, make New York the engaging town it is.

* * *

There is something about me—perhaps the adenoidal expression or the pie feet—that appears to inspire goofy questioning. Less than a week ago a cuckoo with a flowing mane like a Chautauqua lecturer stopped me in a theater lobby and wanted to know if I happened to be at all interested in a scientific experiment that would transmute sawdust into a priceless commodity.

People never learn, it seems. Ten days after the recent panic in stocks, a salesman made $300 in a single week's commission trafficking in a new fake issue among those who were badly hit in the crash.

* * *

Slick sellers of dubious stocks prefer a "prospect" who has been trimmed several times. They are able to offer a sympathy that seems tremendously sincere and thus camouflage their own rascalities. And, too, a sucker never relinquishes the frail hope of getting his money back.

* * *

A reformed salesman of a shady financial house tells me wasteful wives contribute largely to the sale of gyp stocks. They encourage husbands to take a chance for they see in that a hope of continuing their own profligacy.
